DIVERS IN LAST TRY TO SAVE 6 ON S4

Provincetown, Dec. 20.—The last valiant effort to rescue the six men entombed alive in the sunken submarine S4 was to be made late this afternoon when two divers prepared for descent aboard the Mine Layer Falcoon. They will drill into the steel trap with special electrical equipment and force oxygen into the torpedo compartment forward where the men, dying, are imprisoned. Food will follow fresh air into the chamber.

A slight shift in wind making for calmer conditions and an order from Washington to proceed with the attempt "at all cost" spurred the rescue fleet, balked by fierce gales for two days, to new effort.

The attempt to force air in to the entombed men was to be made through a casting permanent on the submarine deck forward of the conning tower.

This casting, in the shape of a "T" with the stem of the letter running fore and aft, is equipped at each end of the letter cross-piece with what is called an "S-C Tube." Each of the two tubes is threaded and valved. The tubes lead into the torpedo room where the entombed men are.

When the divers go down, tapped signals will request the LINDBERGH SAW two Mexican bull fights on Sunday. A savage bull is chosen, of a race bred for fighting. It is tormented with numerous small wounds until infuriated and then killed by a skillful butcher who is the nation's hero in Mexico and Spain.

Horses are disemboweled, an occasional man killed. Women look on and sigh for the great bull killer. So it has gone since the small-waisted bull fighters of Crete escaped between the bull's horns 5,000 years ago.

Bull killers and spectators believe when their bull fight days are over they are taken up to a heaven in which they associate, through eternity, on intimate terms with the ruler of the universe. They must have a poor opinion of His taste.

The International Canary Roller Breeders' Association are holding a singing competition in Milwaukee. Birds winning will be exhibited. Music is very old. Birds were singing and whistling on earth millions of years before men came, with their grand opera and marvellous musical machinery.

What taught birds to sing? How does evolution account for it? It was not part of the survival of the fittest, for a singing bird must attract the attention of its enemies. Before they had ever heard music the females could not know enough to insist on a musical mate.

Be that as it may, teach your children singing and playing. Include some musical instruments in your Christmas gift collection. First come the music machines that delight all the family. But do not forget this statement by Henry Ford, who plays the fiddle: "Every child should be taught to play some instrument for himself, and not live and die a mere listener."

PRIEST PLANS TRIP DOWN TO S4 FOR LAST RITES

Provincetown, Dec. 20.—If, by going down in a diver's suit or any other way, Rev. John Silvia can get within hearing distance of the men trapped alive aboard the sunken submarine S4 he will administer the last rites of the Catholic Church.

Neither this priest, pastor of St. Peter's Church here, nor his curate, Rev. Francis Coyle, will avoid any possible means of performing this solemn duty, even though the hazards that promise to confront

COMMISSION FIGHTS TO RETAIN HALF FARES

The half fare for school pupils riding on street car lines in Massachusetts should be retained, and the law granting children this benefit should not be repealed, the Public Utilities Commission today said in a report to the Legislature.

It is doubtful if repeal of the half fare law would be of material benefit to many companies, while the present law is of benefit to countless families of small means desirous of educating their children, the commission declared.

The commission investigated the matter at the request of the Legislature as a result of a bill introduced at the last session providing for drastic changes in the law.

WOMAN HELD IN $30,000 IN LAND FRAUD IN HUB

Mrs. Myra Hill, who was brought from Washington a few days ago by Inspector John Dorsey and Policewoman Irene McAuliffe, was arraigned before Judge Fosdick in Superior Criminal Court today on an indictment charging her with obtaining more than $150,000 from residents of Boston by false representations in Florida land schemes.

Mrs. Hill pleaded not guilty, and was held in $30,000 for trial.

Inspector Dorsey and Mrs. McAuliffe had attempted to get Mrs. Hill several weeks ago, but she obtained her release in habeas corpus proceedings in the District of Columbia. When they made their last visit on Dec. 15 and found Mrs. Hill, they took her in an automobile beyond the jurisdiction of the Washington courts.

7,000 HUNT IDENTIFIED YOUTH AS GIRL SLAYER

Los Angeles, Dec. 20 (A.P.)—A heavy guard was thrown today about Central Police Station, where a man, said to be a friend of the slayer of Marian Parker, is being held. A wave of muttered threats over the city was responsible for the move.

A false report that William Edward Hickman, sought as the slayer, had been captured threw the Central station into confusion.

The fever heat of one of the greatest man hunts on record broke only for a minute or two, however, and the great drive went on again with 7,000 police officers on

HIT-RUN DRIVER HIDES BODY; GIRL IS INJURED

A man was dead today and a woman was in a critical condition in Massachusetts General Hospital, both victims of "hit and run" drivers, for whom searches are being made by police of two cities.

Miss Elizabeth Gallagher, employed in the household of Harry Porter Bigelow in Chestnut street, Brookline, was struck by a car at Charles and Beacon streets early today.

The man killed, and believed possibly by the police to be "Corky," Hanley, old time convict who served long years in State Prison at Charlestown, was struck down in Union street, Lynn, and the body was then hidden in a four-foot trench of a building under construction.

The body was found by Patrolman Joseph Twohig in front of No. 35 Union street, Lynn, lying on its right side with the legs drawn up.

W. R. HEARST REPLIES TO THE OPEN LETTER OF SENATOR NORRIS

STATEMENT BY WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

IT is not necessary to reply to Senator Norris' hysterical and vituperative statement in kind.

I might state, however, that if Senator Norris is anxious to establish the truth, he might begin by telling the truth, a thing that he has distinctly refrained from doing throughout his whole statement.

The plain facts of this whole Mexican matter are that these Mexican documents are apparently quite authentic, and that no proof whatever has been produced of their lack of authenticity.

ONE KILLED, 7 HURT IN U. S. S. LANGLEY BLAST

San Diego, Cal., Dec. 20 (A.P.).—Chief Machinist S. D. Thornton was killed, four men were injured seriously and three were slightly hurt in an explosion aboard the United States naval aircraft carrier Langley here today.

Fire broke out aboard and the navy tug Koko and a San Diego fireboat were dispatched to the scene, but the crew extinguished the fire with steam.

At naval headquarters it was stated no details of the explosion had been received other than one man had been killed and seven injured.

Naval officers expressed the belief the explosion was from gasoline stored on the Langley.

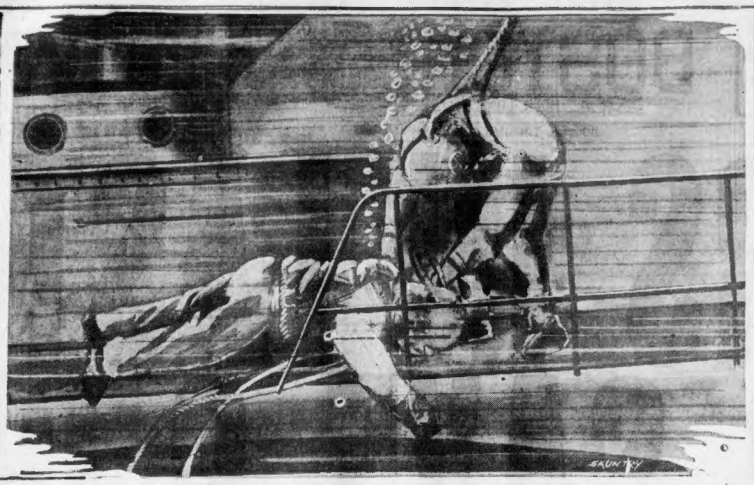

The Langley has been used as the flagship of Rear Admiral J. M. Reeves, commander of the aircraft squadron of the battle fleet. She carries a normal equipment of 370 enlisted men and 125 officers.

Rescue Divers Battle Death for Selves as Life Line Snaps Under Sea on Ill-Fated Submarine

ALMOST ANOTHER FATALITY

SKETCH SHOWS HOW EADY SAVED MICHAELS' LIFE

Sketch by Boston Evening American staff artist shows how Diver Thomas Eady rescued Diver Fred Michaels from certain death on top of the sunken submarine S4, when Michaels' life line became entangled. Both men were nearly dead when they got to the surface. The diver was rushed to Boston immediately on the Falcon, and he is under treatment at the Chelsea Naval Hospital.

imprisoned sailors to open another valve, a "listening valve," located at the port side of the torpedo room, forward—practically in the corner.

Some water will rush in, but it is expected the inflow will be negligible, and the flow will halt under the pressure of the compressed air forced in through the S-0 tubes an aperture drilled in the side.

Liquid food can also be sent down through the same method and can be caught by the imprisoned men, if the actions of the rescuers and the prisoners are co-ordinated.

The six men were alive at 6:20 a. m. today. Tappings, heard at intervals since then, have not been in code, but are believed to have come from the men aboard the S4.

A message received at 2 a. m. today from the men said:

"We are still alive, but slowly dying from lack of pure air."

The six entrapped men later received probably their last message from the world outside their prison before death claims them or their rescue—now almost beyond the realm of possibility—is effected.

It was a message of love and hope flung in the face of almost certain death.

They heard. Down there in the forward torpedo compartment where for seventy-three hours now they have been trapped, they heard Somebody heard.

For back to the S8's sensitive "ear"—back to the waiting, world gripped in a shroud of grief, despair and hopelessness, yet thrilling to their courage—they sent an answer.

Tap, tap, tap, it came. Sound of a hammer against the steel wall of their prison.

Tap, tap—tap. Faintly, barely distinguishable. But an acknowledgment that the last message had been received.

Later there came the faint sounds that the men above interpreted as indications the men were trying by some means to get out, even if they died in the attempt.

Naval men believe there is no possible way they could effect their own release.

The men who heard the tapping could vision only too clearly the condition of the senders. Could close their eyes and see that tragic gesture

Sickness Saves Two From Fate of Mates on Sunken Sub

Portsmouth, N. H., Dec. 20 (A.P.).—Two men saved by illness from making the last tragic trip on the submarine S4 were in the hospital at the navy yard here today watching with tense eagerness for the latest news of their shipmates imprisoned at the bottom of the sea.

It was on the day that the S4 left here after repairs to her standardization tests that J. A. Guidry, gunner's mate was taken to the hospital suffering from a lame back.

James B. Rice, machinist's mate, entered the hospital a month ago because of measles and complications. Guidry's home is in San Antonio, Tex., and Rice comes from Los Angeles, Calif.

AIR EXPERT HAS PLAN TO AID SUB VICTIMS

New York, Dec. 20 (I.N.S.).—Captain Harry Davis, former engineer commander of the second pursuit squadron of the country's air forces during the World War, inventor and a mechanical engineer of twenty years' experience, today telegraphed Admiral Brumby in charge of S4 rescue operations, a plan for getting air and food to the six men entrapped in the submarine's forward compartment.

Captain Davis told International News Service that he had worked throughout the night drawing specifications of his plan, which consists of a hollow drill with an outside air valve connection.

The engineer stated that the drill could be bored directly through the hull of the sunken submersible into the torpedo room where the men lay helpless.

His telegram to Admiral Brumby reads:

"If you have motor to drill under water have plan to drill into forward compartment with special hollow drill having outside valve air connection. Can give you complete specifications of tool which can be made by any mechanic within one hour. This will supply air and liquid food."

Captain Davis stated that he had complete plans for his device and was prepared to offer his services immediately.

them would be greater than those underwent by the most courageous chaplains of the World War.

This twin pledge of devotion to duty and tradition was made by Father Silvia and Father Coyle today.

"I will ask to be lowered to the submarine, if there develops the least chance of getting in," said Father Silvia. "It is not a question of whether we want to go to the bottom of the ocean. It is our duty. We shall meet it, fo rthere is no alternative.

"But before we can administer the last rites of the Catholic church we must be within speaking distance of the person to whom the rites are being given. Both Father Coyle and myself have already sought to go to the scene of the wreck, but boatmen declared the water was too rough.

"If the emergency arises where our presence is needed and can be used, we will go out by plane or any means within our power to command. Neither of us have any fear of going down in a diver's suit if we find we can't get into the submarine.

"I believe some of the men are still alive. Everything seems to indicate that, and we are offering up prayers for their safe rescue."

Newport Churches To Hold Prayers for Sub Victims

Newport, R. I., Dec. 20 (A.P.).—All the Catholic and Protestant churches in Newport will hold services tomorrow at which prayers will be offered for the victims of the sinking of the submarine S4.

This was arranged at a conference today between Mayor M. A. Sullivan and the pastors of the churches.

Peking, Dec. 20 (A.P.).—The latest official foreign reports enable one to make a fairly accurate estimate of the costs of Canton's orgy.

At least 8,000 are believed to have perished, the Communists, who seized the city December 11, killed 4,000, while the anti-Reds in recapturing the city two days later killed 3,000.

At least eight Russians were executed in short order after being ignominously paraded.

Lindbergh Takes Calles and Obregon on Their First Trips

Mexico City, Dec. 20 (A.P.).—President Calles and former President Obregon today made separate flights, with Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, American air hero, at the stick of a commercial plane lent for the trip.

This was the first time that either Calles or Obregon had flown and both were eager to make the flight.

Ambassador Morrow may also make a flight with Colonel Lindbergh, but no time has been definitely selected.

President Calles and General Obregon were in the air about 25 minutes each. The President, making his first flight, went up first with the American flier.

Obregon, the only candidate left in the field for next year's presidential election, went up immediately afterward.

Both Calles and Obregon, probably the two most powerful men in Mexico, expressed pleasure in the flight, and said they had confidence in the American airman.

Believe Men on S4 Are Keeping Still to Save Air

Washington, Dec. 20 (A.P.).—Belief that the six men holding desperately to life in the torpedo room of the wrecked S4, have been lying on their backs and keeping still so as to conserve breathable air and prolong life was expressed here today by Miss Hermione Fitch, sister of Lieut. G. N. Fitch, one of the six.

BRIDE'S HOPES VANISH AS HUSBAND IS LISTED ON S4

Indiana Wife Thought Mate on Other Ship

New London, Dec. 20.—Out of the West today came a calm, confident message from a bride of seven months, telling navy officials that she had no fear for the safety of her husband aboard the stricken submarine S4 "because he wasn't on the submarine."

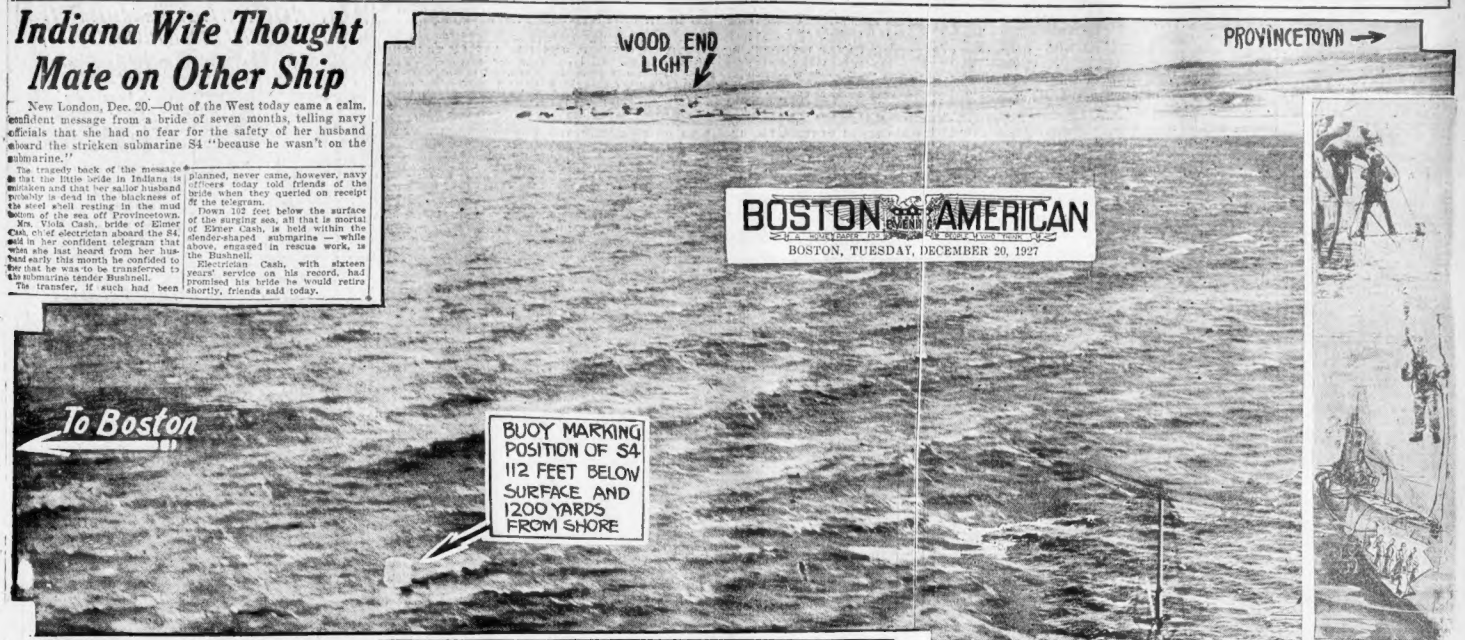

The tragedy back of the message is that the little bride in Indiana is mistaken and that her sailor husband probably is dead in the blackness of the steel shell resting in the mud bottom of the sea off Provincetown.

Mrs. Viola Cash, bride of Elmer Cash, chief electrician aboard the S4, said in her confident telegram that when she last heard from her husband early this month he confided to her that he was to be transferred to the submarine tender Bushnell.

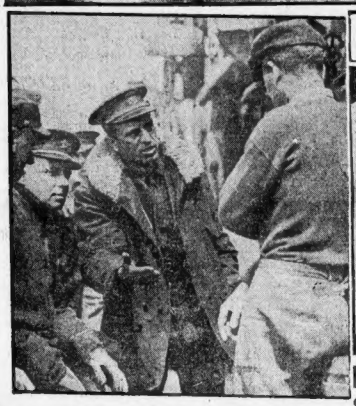

The transfer, if such had been planned, never came, however, navy officers today told friends of the bride when they queried on receipt of the telegram.

Down 102 feet below the surface of the surging sea, all that is mortal of Elmer Cash, is held within the slender-shaped submarine — while above, engaged in rescue work, is the Bushnell.

Electrician Cash, with sixteen years' service on his record, had promised his bride he would retire shortly, friends said today.

Christmas preparations are saddened in the home of Mrs. Katherine Snizek at Ridgefield Park, N. J., who is shown here with her grandson Pabian, 5, for her son, Frank, was one member of the crew of the S4. Frank Snizek was torpedoman on the S4 and is shown here in civilian clothes.

Torpedoman Frank Snizer is believed to be one of the six men trapped in the torpedo compartment of the S4.

This photo of the scene of S4 disaster was taken from a Boston Evening American airplane as it flew over the grave of the submarine. One of the rescue ships, shown anchored close to the buoy marking the position of the S4, is riding out the gale that prevented further attempts to rescue the imprisoned men.

Above is a photograph of the S8 taken from the Boston Evening American airplane off Provincetown today. It shows the heavy seas that hamper the rescue work on the sunken S4. It was by the oscillators of the S8 that the message was sent to Lieutenant Fitch from his wife and drew an acknowledgement by hammer-tapping which showed the gallant six to be still alive within the steel walls of the submarine.

Arrow points to diver about to descend 112 feet in the sea off Provincetown to aid in the rescue of the surviving six of the submarine's crew. The hardy men-fish are doing their utmost in daring the perils of the deep. When L. S. Michaels' air lines were entangled, Diver Eadie went to his rescue and brought him to the deck of the Falcon, almost beyond recovery. He is being treated at the Chelsea Naval Hospital, where he was rushed. (I.N.R.)

PRINCE OBOLENSKY GIVES SUBSCRIPTION CONCERT HERE NEXT YEAR, SAYS BETTY ALDEN

PLEASURES DEFERRED invariably become pleasures doubly anticipated. So it goes with the very smart subscription concert Prince Alexis Obolensky is to give, possibly some time in January, probably at the Ritz, and certainly with sponsorship superbly imposing. An invitation list pruned with nicety serves to bring in local great ones of the charmed circle that makes up Boston's resident aristocracy. Ever alert to sponsor the artist of romantic background are they. And who more than an Obolensky of Russia, cousin to the Emperor and favored of Grand Dukes, has this aura?

FOR A ONE-TIME RUSSIAN Prince's Boston appearance quite fittingly leadership for the occasion belongs to a one-time Ambassadress to the Russian Court, Mrs. Curtis Guild. In the days when a Czar ruled in St. Petersburg, Mrs. Guild knew the Obolensky family in all its glories of power and vast estates and fabulous wealth. The Prince is another of those gifted Russians who, in days of adversity, turns a magnificent and beautifully trained voice to account and makes for himself an envied place in the concert world. Needless to say he will be the vogue in Boston. His metropolitan appearances have been triumphs.

THE LITTLE BIRD THAT SITS on a bough and cheeps of this and that tells that Mrs. S. Parker Bremer, having made a pronounced success here in Boston, is soon away other musical worlds to conquer. Blessed with a pleasing voice and a charming stage personality, Mrs. Bremer's Boston success was a foregone conclusion. Probably when she appears in Rome and in Berlin the same success will attend her, even in those centres of musical culture and excellence. Mrs. Bremer's apartment, down at the foot of Beacon Hill, is a gem, so privileged ones claim, not hesitating to say it is one of Boston's most desirable.

REPERTORY THEATRE WITH "Jack and the Beanstalk" on December 27 promises to be the sort of benefit that delights its promoters. Tickets are being snapped up with dispatch, and many are the parties of the very young set fond parents will marshal to see the show. Miss Katharine Warren does the "Jack" whimsically accoutered in rakish cap and dashing doublet. This benefit is Mrs. Bernard Trafford's energetic financial effort for Elizabeth Peabody House. Coming in the Christmas Holidays its success is doubly assured. The Youngest Set is free from school duties, and adores being taken to the theatre.

KATHERINE CHAPMAN WARREN

THE "VANISHING LUNCHEONS" FOR THE SUNNYSIDE DAY NURSERY ARE NOT YET AT THE vanishing point by any means. Like an endless chain they weld their links—the only part that vanishes being the very delectable luncheons themselves. Mrs. Nathaniel F Emmons of Hingham is giving one this week, having been Mrs. Richard Lawrence's guest last week. Mrs. Emmons gives the most charming entertainments. Her lovely Colonial mansion in Hingham fairly breathes warm hospitality, and then, too, she has a gem of a cook, an old family servitor versed in the culinary arts, who can serve up famous dishes to the Queen's taste.

FOR MISS MARY THOMPSON, DEBUTANTE, OF CONCORD, THE 13TH DAY OF THE MONTH, and a Friday to boot, holds not the slightest bugaboo. On the contrary, only brightest anticipations are hers for this date so superstition-ridden. On it she is being "entertained for" in delightful fashion Mrs. Henry Bigelow, also hailing from the historic small town that was once a Revolutionary headliner, is giving a dinner at the Club Marco. To dine, intermittently; to dance unceasingly, this is what the Young Set adores. And can do to its heart's content at the Club Marco. The call of the entree or the dessert is as nothing to the call of the flute and the saxaphone.

DEBUTANTE PARTIES, NOT LARGE TO BE SURE, BUT THE MORE ENJOYABLE BECAUSE intimately small, continue to dot the calendar and intrigue the buds. Mrs. Cyrus Sargeant, mother of a pretty bud, Miss Virginia Lee Sargeant, gave a before-the-theatre party at the Club Marco not long ago, and then took her daughter and her young guests on to a play. Miss Sergeant has had several pleasant things done for her, high in this category the house dance in Cambridge only a short week ago. As a probationary Junior Leaguer, a successful debutante and a neophite of the Vincent Club, Miss Sargeant finds her first season most engrossing.

MR. AND MRS. HOLLIS FRENCH, BACK FROM A SHORT EUROPEAN JAUNT, ARE NICELY established in their ever-so-pleasant apartment at the foot of the Hill on Beacon Street. They went abroad about six weeks ago and stayed just long enough for Mr. French to transact some business and for Mrs. French to dash through the shops. The new Beacon street apartment is delightfully situated, with the vistas of the Gardens and the myriad twinkling lights spread forth before its windows.

ONE, AT LEAST, OF BEACON STREET'S MAGNIFICENT HOMES will remain shuttered and unused this Winter, since Mrs. Bayard Thayer and her two daughters, Miss Mabel Bayard Thayer and Miss Ruth Thayer, have taken an apartment at the Ritz until such time as they start off on some contemplated travels. The Thayer town house is one of those handsome piles lending elegance to Beacon street, on the Garden side, and just a step away from another notable mansion, that of the Henry F. Sears. Like the Thayer town house, the Sears' establishment this season is to all intents unoccupied, since the family finds the Beverly place so much to its liking.

'L' ASKS TRIAL FOR BUSES TO SEAT 40 EACH

A 60-day trial of two 31-foot buses, three feet in excess of the present 28-foot limit under the law, was asked today of the Public Utilities Commission by H. Ware Barnum, counsel for the Boston Elevated Street Railway.

The new experimental buses seat 40 passengers as compared with 29 in the ones now operated.

Attorney Barnum said it was the intention of the company, if permission is granted, to run the new buses for the trial period over the Fenway-to-Bowdoin square route.

The experiment, he said, will furnish valuable information in connection with any amendments proposed for changing the present 28 foot length.

Miss Evelyn A. Hill, a Lynn dancer, who is suing the Boston Elevated Railway for $30,000 damages for an injury.

DANCER SUES 'L' FOR $30,000

Declaring she was injured while stepping from a trolley car, her injuries preventing her from teaching acrobatic and toe dancing, for which she had studied several years, Miss Evelyn A. Hill of Lynn today sued the Boston Elevated Railway for $30,000.

Attorney John H. O'Neil, who represents Miss Hill, also filed a $10,000 suit against the company for her mother based on the same allegations. The alleged accident occurred at Harvard square on a surface line.

SHIPPING AND AIR MAIL DELAYED, AUTOS STALLED

New York, Dec. 20 (A.P.)—Winter arrived ahead of schedule and had an icy grip on the eastern section of the country today. Failing temperatures created bleak Christmas week weather on land, while high winds reached far out to sea to delay seven transatlantic liners loaded with 18,000 sacks of Christmas mail. All forms of traffic were delayed. One man died of exhaustion in Erie, Pa.

Airmail traffic was disrupted in Western New York. Communication lines were down in many places in the Eastern Lake region. Two hundred stranded motorists were rescued from snowdrifts in which their automobiles had stalled on the south shore of Lake Erie.

GIRL HELD IN N. Y. SENT BACK TO SPRINGFIELD

New York, Dec. 20 (A.P.)—Miss Constance Blanchard, 27, of Maple avenue, Springfield, was turned over to police of that city today to face a charge of grand larceny.

She said she had come here to marry a "Bob Henry," who induced her to deposit a worthless check in a Springfield bank and draw $200 on the account. Henry deserted her after she had given him most of the money. She told police who arrested her for giving a bogus check to pay her hotel bill.

NO SPECIAL CHRISTMAS PARDONS FROM COOLIDGE

Washington, Dec. 20 (A.P.).—President Coolidge does not contemplate the issuing of any special Christmas pardons. He is issuing pardons from day to day, it was said, at the White House today, so that every day might be considered Christmas for the men so benefited.

ATTACKS PLANS OF B. & M.

Edmund D. Codman of Boston, former president of the Fitchburg railroad, and a substantial stockholder of the Boston & Maine railroad, has filed a bill in equity in the Supreme Judicial Court in which he seeks to restrain action taken by the management of the Boston & Maine railroad in connection with the proposed new North Station involving the use of the property, credit or resources of the railroad in the building of a hotel, public office building and sports arena or coliseum.

Mr. Codman's attorneys assert that his action should not be regarded in any way as an effort on his part to prevent the creation of improved terminal facilities at the North Station. What he objects to is participation by the railroad in business enterprises entirely foreign to the purpose for which railroads are chartered in this Commonwealth.

Mr. Codman contends that the Boston & Maine Railroad is without any charter authority, either here or in Maine and New Hampshire to engage in the hotel business, the public office building business, or the sports arena business, and he alleges that the proposed participation by the railroad in enterprises of this character should be restrained as ultra vires of the corporation.

QUESTIONS LEGALITY.

In his bill Mr. Codman raises not only the question of the lawful power of the railroad to enter upon businesses foreign to the scope of its character, but also its right in any event to lease substantial portions of its terminal location for other than railroad purposes without specific legislative consent.

Mr. Codman alleges that the contract for the construction of the proposed new hotel, office building, sports arena, terminal structure was placed with the Dwight P. Robinson & Company Construction Company, Incorporated, a company in which Chairman Loring of the Boston & Maine Board was a director from 1920 to 1928, without competitive bidding, and he contends that such action by the Boston & Maine management was in violation of the spirit and purpose of the Clayton Anti-Trust Act, and contrary to sound public policy, and that this contract should therefore be set aside.

Mr. Codman also contends that inasmuch as four members of the Boston & Maine directors, namely: President Hannaway, Chairman Loring and Messrs. Lisgott and Perkins are also stockholders and directors of the Boston Madison Square Garden Corporation; that the lease of the proposed sports arena and coliseum portion of the new terminal that has been entered into between the Boston & Maine and the Garden Corporation is practically a trade between the Boston & Maine and its own directors, and that this lease should therefore be set aside as contrary to sound public policy.

TERMED HAZARDOUS.

Mr. Codman also alleges that the Boston District is already overbuilt in the matter of hotels; that there is a big oversupply of public office building space, and that buildings now utilized for sports purposes are sufficient to meet any and all present demands, and that none of the structures now used for sports purposes have recently earned a profit; and from these facts he contends that participation by the Boston & Maine in the promotion of a hotel, public office building and sports arena would be a hazardous and speculative adventure in the use of funds of the railroad for which there is no just or lawful excuse.

From a stockholder's point of view, Mr. Codman points out that the railroad has only recently been through an assessment reorganization; that it has not been able to pay a dividend on its common stock since 1913 and has only just recently been able to pay current dividends upon certain classes of its preferred issues; that litigation is now pending in the Supreme Judicial Court in which a preferred stockholder is seeking to compel the Boston & Maine railroad to pay passed dividends upon the old preferred issue, and in that litigation the Boston & Maine railroad has asserted that it is now unable to pay any dividends except current dividends upon first preferred and the very recently issued prior preference issues; that the road has just suffered a loss of $2,500,000 as a result of flood damage, and that therefore in the entire record of its present condition, it is not now properly able to embark upon a speculative $10,000,000 terminal enterprise such as is here proposed.

Mr. Codman contends that a new terminal adequate in every way to meet the requirements of the railroad, and of the public, could be built for approximately $5,000,000, and he alleges that there is no justification for the proposed expenditure of an additional $7,000,000 in this connection.

Mr. Codman asks that all of the respondents may be permanently enjoined from any use of Boston & Maine Railroad property or resources in the building of a hotel, public office building and sports coliseum, and that all contracts and leases heretofore entered into between the Boston & Maine Railroad and any of the other respondents that in any way authorize the construction or operation of a hotel, public office building and arena or sports coliseum by the Boston & Maine Railroad, directly or indirectly, may be declared null and void.

The bill was filed for Mr. Codman by his attorneys, Conrad W. Crooker and George Fox Tucker, of Boston, and an order or notice has been issued thereon, returnable before during Force on Friday.

PLAN FOR STADIUM HELD UP

Because City Councillor Henry Parkman, Jr., of the Back Bay, questioned the right of the Park Commission to take the income from the $5,000,000 fund left to the city by his uncle, the late George F. Parkman, Mayor Nichols' plan for an $185,000 shoolboy stadium has been held up.

Mayor Nichols in seeking $85,014.62 which represents the income now in the bank that must be appropriated before December 31, or revert to the principal under the provisions of the fund.

Although the council passed the appropriation, the opposition put through a vote to reconsider and the matter will not be decided until the last day of the year, when the present council holds its final session.

NEEDS 11 VOTES.

Then, if the order is passed the work on the stadium will start, but if Councillor Parkman can secure eleven votes, Park Commissioners William P. Long, Charles H. Innand Charles F. Norton will have find some other means of raising $185,000.

With five councillors absent, the opposition numbered seven, Parkman, Bush, Dowling, Guild, Lyndon McGrath and Wilson, while favoring the appropriation were nine, Arnold, Donovan, Englert, Fitzgerald, Green, Keene, McMahon Ruby and Wragg.

Councillor Horace Guild of Jamaica Plain, the Mayor's home ward, pressed a motion for reconsideration, after he had insisted that Councillor Parkman's remarks had proved the unmistakable illegality of the appropriation.

In reading from his uncle's will Councillor Parkman stated that the income from the fund was to be used for the maintenance and improvement of the Common and such parks as were in existence when the will was drawn in 1887. No mention was made of playgrounds, he said, and it is the duty of the city to comply with the intentions of the donor of the gift.

COMMISSION'S WARNING.

Further, he pointed out, the special Parkman fund commission of 1921, while admitting the need of athletic fields, warned that the open spaces of the park system should not be sacrificed for this purpose.

"I believe that if this project is carried through," declared Councillor Parkman, "it will spoil the Fens for the purpose for which it was intended, and will not carry out the purposes of the creator of this fund." The commission, he explained, reported that the essence of a park is in its opportunity to afford rest and relief to the people. A stadium, he said, would bring the excitement of large crowds and the menace of congestion to spoil the Fens for park purposes.

ATTACKS PLAN.

Councillor Guild accused the Park Commission of attempting to push through large appropriations at the end of each year, and protested that the commission has failed to follow its program as presented to the Council a year ago.

He attacked the purpose of a schoolboy stadium, claiming that schoolboy athletics are primarily for the participants, rather than for the spectators.

"For these reasons," said Councillor Guild, "I believe we should let this money go into the principal of the fund, where it will yield an annual income of $3,800 or $3,000."

PROFESSOR COPELAND IN ANNUAL READING

A crowd of Harvard students stormed the doors of the Harvard Union dining-room to hear Professor Charles T. Copeland, Boylston professor of rhetoric and oratory, popularly known as "Copey," give his annual Christmas reading and more than 100 were turned away disappointed.

Professor Copeland gave his Christmas reading, despite the fact that he is on leave of absence from his academic duties during this half year.

The reading was prefaced with a short talk on "Old Books and New," by Professor Copeland, and the selections of the reading which followed included: "The Eathen," by Rudyard Kipling; "Christmas Afternoon," by Robert C. Benchley, and a chapter of "David's First Dissertation."

CHILDREN TO BE GUESTS AT AMERICAN SHOW

Christmas is here again. And what a Christmas it will be!

This may not mean much to the adults and the older people, but to the kiddies it means everything.

For instance, on Saturday morning, at 10:30, the youthful readers of the Boston Evening American, will be guests at a special performance arranged by the American in conjunction with Loew's State Theatre.

The films to be shown are "Love 'em and Feed 'em," with Max Davidson and "In Old Kentucky," with Helene Costello and James Murray, which are at the State this week.

QUINCY UNDERPASS SOUGHT IN BILL

A bill authorizing the metropolitan district commission to construct an underpass for foot traffic at the Quincy Shore Reservation, Sachem street, Wollaston, at an expense of $12,000 was filed with the Legislature by Senator Henry L. Shattuck of Quincy.

TRAPPED MEN ABOARD SUNKEN SUB SEEK TO FREE THEMSELVES

ithe narrow, darkened room below tm where oxygen was gone at ir, and only carbon dioxide remined to be breathed until suffocion ended agony and a hope that de only with the end of all things. The diminishing strength of those lapings told the rescue fleet the story they did not want to hear—that the end was then so close that nothing but a miracle could save the imprisoned men.

Gale Dooming Men

For the agencies of man, against which all nature has seemed arrayed since the fatal crash that took 34 lives Saturday afternoon, were of no avail early today.

The wind still blew from the northwest with the same fury and the seas made before it with a fury that no navigators could brave.

The Falcon, aboard which Admiral Frank H. Brumby directed operations, was forced to leave her position above the graveyard of the S4 and seek the shelter of Provincetown Harbor.

The fleet of 26 naval vessels, in a white shroud of freezing spray, dragged anchors on the soft mud bottom. No diver could descend and until divers can descend there is no chance of rescue.

The attempt to get oxygen and food through to the men late today was the final move towards rescue, for after tonight there can be no life aboard the sunken craft. The procedure has never been attempted before, Captain King said.

A statement from naval officers said whatever hope there was that the men might release themselves through the torpedo tubes. There is no air in the tubes for their discharge.

Names of 6 Men Trapped in S4 Torpedo Room

The six living men trapped in the torpedo room of the sunken S4 are believed to be Lieutenant Graham N Fitch and enlisted men R I Short, R. A Crabb, George Pelnar, Frank Smizek and J L Stevens.

This information was given out by Rear Admiral Philip Andrews of the Charlestown Navy Yard.

Messages From Deep

The last message sent to Lieutenant Fitch was transmitted constantly for seven hours before acknowledgement of its reception, officers on the S8 pointed out. The sound of the oscillator, they said, would be extremely loud in the S4 and the men must have been near death at that time or they would have answered sooner.

The last sounds heard may have been the attempt of one man to crawl through the torpedo tube.

Such a course, if it is attempted, is practically certain to bring swift death to the man who tries it—swift death to the other five.

If the tube were clear, Commander J. H. Hoover, submarine officer, said today that such an attempt would have some chance of success provided the man who tried it was not too weak. It would be necessary for him to crawl into the tube with the inner doors closing behind him.

May Sacrifice Life

As the outer door opened he would be compelled to hold his breath while the tube filled with water and then crawl 21 feet through the smooth, grease-lined bore of the water-filled tube. He would then be shot to the surface, dead or unconscious.

News of the reception of her message was given Mrs. Fitch in Boston by the navy department. The despair which overwhelmed her during the night became a new hope. Yet she dared not hope. She borders on collapse.

The red buoy which marks the graveyard of the S4 and the steel tomb of six living men rocks, rythmically awash in the white-crested seas. Like a bell without a tongue, tolling a soundless dirge.

Even as news was flashed that the men still lived the forecast of the weather anticipated a continuation of strong northerly winds and brought a new sinking of hopes with a prediction of storm descending from Nova Scotia.

Lieutenant Charles B. Momsen, Navy submarine expert at Washington, believes that the men will survive until after midnight tonight.

Submarine ventilators which, since shortly after midnight Sunday have provided the means of communication between the six men in the steel trap on the ocean bed and the world outside, are used primarily for depth and distance finding. When fixed for reception the device is marvelously sensitive and has been known to pick up the sound of whale's breathing.

All Dead But Six

The transmission of messages is accomplished by the play of terrific electrical current across a specially constructed diaphragm arrangement, producing a sound under water like the amplified screech of a locomotive.

By manipulating the current control the operator transforms the stacco of the screech into dots and dashes.

The S4 torpedo room does not contain a microphone receiving set, but the men are able to hear by placing their ears against the steel walls.

All hope that any others of the S4's original crew of forty might be alive has been abandoned.

If there is still hope of saving the six, it lies mainly through the torpedo tube which divers will attempt to force immediately the sea subsides enough to allow them to descend.

WIFE SENDS MESSAGE TO HUSBAND TRAPPED ON SUBMARINE

PRAY FOR RESCUE OF VICTIMS

tinue to arrive in spite of the bad weather. Floating derricks and extra pontoon—there are now only three pontoons on the scene—were on the scene.

The U. S. S. Wright, with three pontoons, out of Norfolk, Va., was reported nearing Boston Navy Yard, where she will pick up supplies and proceed here.

The naval tug Triton, reported earlier in the day to have put in at Newport, R. I., did not go there. It was learned today that the Triton was at the Cape Cod Canal under orders to await the arrival of the Tug Iuka.

The Iuka, towing pontoons for use in raising the subbmarine S-4, resumed her voyage from Brooklyn to Provincetown shortly before noon.

Two cranes were towed through the canal by four tugs, the Iwana, Relief, Mohave and Resolute.

The destroyer Sturtevant is en route from Boston Navy Yard with diving equipment and tunneling apparatus.

On the arrival here of the airplane tender Wright, Admiral Brumby is expected to make his quarters aboard her, transferring from the mine layer Falcon.

Of the pontoons being towed by the Iuka, two broke loose and attempted recovery of one nearly cost twelve lives in Long Island Sound.

Twelve men aboard two small boats from the U. S. S. Chewink were thrown into the icy waters when their craft capsized when they attempted to salvage a pontoon which had broken adrift.

The Chewink returned to New London after the unsuccessful attempt to salvage the pontoon. Chief Boatswain King and the men who were swamped made their way to the Long Island shore, where they are still waiting to be picked up when the seas subside.

Get Extra Pontoons

The first and a splendid gesture of tribute for the men carried to the death on the S4 after collision with the destroyer Paulding was made by the New York-Boston steamship Robert E. Lee of the Eastern Steamship Lines. The wreathes were dropped from the steamer as she rounded the tip of the Cape.

Fretting, impatient over the delay in rescue work occasioned by the storm, navy men were yet proud today—proud of the old tradition of the service being upheld by the six men in the S4's trap.

In not one of the messages tapped out by Lieutenant Fitch on the interior of his prison has there been any indication of fear, they point out. All have been matter-of-fact. "Our oxygen is used up. Can you send down a couple more?" was one query.

And that very outspoken question: "Is there any hope?"—

Those men, these rescue workers say, knew everything was being done. They merely wanted an honest opinion as to whether hope existed. And the silence that was their answer, was, perhaps, answer enough.

The sufferings and emotions of the six survivors may never be revealed to the world, in the event that death claims them before the nose of the S4 can be hoisted out of 17 fathoms of water, unless in the long interval since the collision of last Saturday afternoon they have written a log of their harrowing experiences.

Arrival of the equipment now en route will add the last touch of scientific undersea rescue work. The cranes and acetylene torches played a conspicuous part in the raising from the ocean bed of the S51, and many of the company's experts who assisted in that work are accompanying the mechanism today.

Lieut.-Com. Edward Ellsberg, who came from retirement to direct salvage work, will be one of the first to descend when conditions permit. While he waits Ellsberg has been in conference with Captain Ernest T. King, like himself a veteran of S51 operations.

These two experts believe it possible to raise the bow of the S4 above the water line with only two pontoons.

Keep Up Courage

Great as was the anxiety of the rescuers relative to the weather, that of the imprisoned men was infinitely greater, as their lives depended as much upon calm weather as on proper air to breathe in the next few hours.

This was indicated by repeated messages sent out by international code signals by the men themselves, asking their rescuers what weather conditions prevailed.

"What kind of weather are you having above?" one of them asked in dots and dashes made with hammer blows on the steel hull of the wrecked craft.

That same question was asked several times during the day and was received on an oscillator in the radio room on the S8, a sister ship of the ill-fated S4.

These messages were answered by the crew of the S8, which was anchored so close to the watery grave of the S4 that the imprisoned men were able to interpret the replies to their anxious appeals by reciprocating sound waves. In other words, hammer knocks supplanted flags, blinkers or heliographs used in service communication.

A running conversation was held in this manner between the imprisoned men and the crew of the S8, which greatly cheered them. This unusual means of communication, occasionally intercepted by the elements, revealed the horror of the situation which has confronted the survivors of the S4 during the past three days.

"How are you feeling down there," asked the signallers on the S8.

"As good as could be expected under the circumstances," came the reply.

"How's your courage holding out?"

"Great," came from the depths in sharp, staccato blows.

"How is your air?"

"Not very good. We are troubled with chloride gas from the batteries. We would like something to neutralize it."

"How much oxygen have you left?"

"Only enough to last until 6 p. m. tonight.

"How long before you will be able to get us?"

"We are doing everything possible."

"How many of you are left?"

"Six."

"What became of the others?"

"All dead."

RADIO DIALOG

by

C. WILLIAM RADOS

IN the entertainment world it has long been the custom to start things with a big splash. After the opening night the theatre, restaurant etc., gradually abandons the big show and puts on a less expensive array.

The same thing is happening in radio. In the last month or so several "hours" have come on the air. General Motors, Wrigley, Palmolive, all have gone through the state mentioned above.

The first night started off with several widely-known entertainers at the mikes. The entertainment was brilliant; it gave millions of people a chance to hear such popular artists as Goldman, Bugs Baer, Will Rogers, Weber and Fields, and the various masters of ceremonies. For these artists the sponsors paid dearly; very much so.

• • •

In return they received much publicity, huge audiences and the knowledge that they were successfully launched in broadcasting.

Unfortunately, with such big artists the program is not smooth, nor does the advertiser get much advertising. He is overshadowed by the star. So these new hours which have had several weeks' experience are now slowly abandoning feature stars. They are resorting to good programs, well molded and attractive, but without the headliners.

• • •

This is not bad for the public either. It had a chance to hear the famous boys, and will have occasional chances in the future. But the steady business of featuring heavy stars is too expensive for the sponsor and does not come up to the highest standards of radioshowmanship.

It is a strange thing no sponsor has yet hit upon the plan of corraling the famous sports stars in a series of broadcasts. An hour, starting at 10:00 in the evening, could use the various boxers, baseball, football, hockey stars; use well-known sports writers, referees, trainers, coaches and sports players. Possibly the idea could be worked up into a series of smoothly connected broadcasts attractive to the large army of sports fans.

• • •

Oliver says radio will never get any place until they can show the styles through the air. Well, Oliver what do you think we look through, the water?

ORGAN RECITAL A FEATURE

Birge Peterson, concert organist of the Loew State Theatre, will present a second request organ recital this evening through the New England Broadcasting Company's Boston station, WLOE. Mr. Peterson, at the mighty-voiced Wurlitzer of the State Theatre, will present each Tuesday evening a series of all request programs, made up from the popular and classical pieces desired by the radio listeners.

Although the type of music requested each week will be varied, Mr. Peterson will endeavor to present a program which will be in keeping with the occasion, as will be the case this week, when his program will be of a holiday nature.

It is the desire of Mr. Peterson as well as the officials of the New England Broadcasting Company, to determine the best time of day for this type of program and for this reason two recitals will be presented each week, one during the day or early evening and the other late at night. And it is hoped that the response from the radio listeners will aid in a decision.

POLICE CASE IN CAMBRIDGE GOES TO JURY

The case of Lieutenant Inspector Thomas F. Coady and Motorcycle Officer Henry E. Pelletier, on trial in Superior Court at East Cambridge on charges of attempted extortion and conspiracy, went to the jury today at 11:17, following an hour's charge by Judge David F. Dillon.

The jurors must not concern themselves with politics or reform, Judge Dillon instructed them. He also stated that it made no difference whether Patsy D'Alessio of Cambridge, accuser of the two policemen, was guilty or not of the charges of parking without lights and driving under the influence of liquor, charges which caused his arrest and led to his accusation of the two men.

Bequests of $5,000 to the burgomaster of the city of Hamburg, Germany, and $25 to be used toward the construction of a swimming pool at Wellesley College featured the will of Miss Elizabeth White, late of Wellesley, filed today at Norfolk Court, Dedham.

No explanation was made of the bequest to the Hamburg Burgomaster by Miss White, who died December 7.

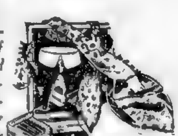

The sum of $5,000 was left to Katherine Riley, "my faithful friend and long-time servant"; $1,000 to Newton Hospital, $1,500 to St. Andrew's Church, Wellesley, $500 of the amount to be used for a window in memory of the testator's mother and brother; $1,000 to the Page Memorial Kindergarten, Wellesley; $1,000 each to two cousins, Hannah O. White and Dellie White of New Orleans, and $1,000 each to Sarah Hussey and Fannie Currier, both of Wellesley.

HIDES BODY OF AUTO VICTIM

Twohig investigated when he noticed that a piece of two by four wood that had rimmed the trench had been disturbed.

The body is at a Lynn undertakers' shop today and Deputy Chief C[illegible] is taking some persons who knew Hanley to view it today. From the description C[illegible] said he believed it might be "Jarkey."

Medical Examiner Nathaniel P. Breed said that the body had been placed in the trench after being killed. He found that the man's skull had been fractured, nose broken, right side of head stove in, and a hip broken. He gave it as his opinion that the automobile which struck the dead man must have been going at terrific speed.

The street at the point is obstructed by the materials for the [illegible] and [illegible] the man was struck when he walked out into the street to pass the obstructions. His body was then placed where it would not attract attention until later.

The man appeared to be about [illegible] years old. He wore a light cap, gray coat, blue trousers and black shoes. At the undertaking parlors it was discovered the man wore two pair of trousers.

The inside pair of trousers was sewed closely about the legs and the bottoms were sewed to the man's stockings.

Lynn police today are checking up automobiles in all sections of the city in the hope of finding some clue to the "hit and run" driver.

PRESIDENT MURPHREE IS FOUND DEAD IN BED

[illegible], Fla., Dec. 20 (A.P.)—President A. A. Murphree of the University of Florida, [illegible] William Jennings Bryan as [illegible], was found dead in bed at his home here [illegible]. His death was attributed to acute disease.

Christmas Gifts Pour Into White House

Washington, Dec. 20 (A.P.)—Christmas gifts for President Coolidge are beginning to find their way to the White House from the four corners of the United States.

The first of the annual batch of turkeys has arrived. He is a 25 or more pounds gobbler, in every way a fit specimen for the presidential Christmas table.

From Idaho has come a sack of potatoes; from Michigan a supply of red beets, and from other parts of the country other edibles from which anyone could select a tempting Christmas dinner.

A little child from the Middle West has sent the President a scrapbook, and a New England grandmother has sent him a pair of woolen wristlets which she knitted herself and to which she attached a card saying:

"These are to keep you warm when you come back to Vermont."

John Coolidge, the President's son, arrived in Washington today to spend the Christmas holidays with his parents. He will remain here until after New Year's, when he will resume his studies at Amherst.

STORK BRINGS GIRL TO MRS. ARCHIE ROOSEVELT

New York, Dec. 20 (A.P.)—Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, widow of the former President, is again a grandmother. A daughter has been born to Captain Archie Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt. The mother was formerly Grace S. Lockwood of Boston.

The Constant Flame

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER, Author of The Good Bad Girl

The Love Story of Emily Day of Dedham, by a Noted Writer of Romance

CHAPTER 8

ON the edge of the lawn there was a circular pergola, very white and ghostly in the dim light, above a stone bench. Rose vines swayed overhead, spilling a soft fragrance.

Emily stole in here, sat down with an awed happiness, relaxed to the charm of splendid night. No problem to ponder out here, only beauty. A rushing tide of beauty rising about her, overwhelming with gentle peace.

Why should she care what others did—what years might bring? Always this to turn to. Kent was going away; going out of her life. He would come back and marry Marilee Grainger and she would see him no more. Well, no use feeling sorry. Life was like that—ships that pass . . .

He was beside her suddenly. Putting his arm along the back of the seat, smiling.

"Saw you coming out, Em. Mind company? This makes me think of Como—" He told her about Italian moonlight on the loveliest lake in the world. Matter of fact his words were, but he had the gift of vividness; she saw him drifting on a night like this between the blue of the water and the blue of the sky, drifting lazily, lonesomely, while songs wafted from the shore.

"But you loved it, Kent?"

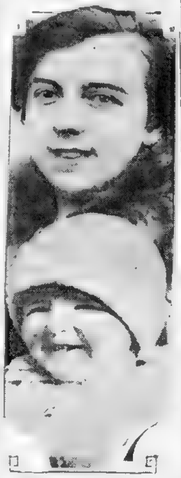

He settled down on the bench—[illegible] his shoulder touched hers. "I love new places. It kept me back in school though—that's why I've got to work—and the next couple of years. You know I was going away, Emmy?"

Going away—yes. He would go away just as long as it with its beauty would vanish... Gray dawn would come and gray days. She started to say "I heard—" but the words wouldn't pass her lips.

"Planning to study [illegible]," he went on. "I think that'd be pretty nice

HUB GIRL IS REAL AID TO SANTA

The most gratifying letters which the Goodfellow Editor has received have been in the mail deliveries of the past few days. They are letters from Goodfellows, written after they had called upon needy families whose names had been supplied by the Goodfellow Editor.

"I have called on the family assigned to me and found that their need was by no means exaggerated. I have supplied the children with shoes and warm clothes and have arranged for their Christmas dinner," is the general tenor of these letters.

In many cases, after witnessing the dire need in the little homes which they have visited, Goodfellows have been moved to extend their generosity far beyond their original intentions.

A DEVOTED GOOD FELLOW.

One of the most devoted Goodfellows is a young Back Bay woman who requested the names of two families for whom she might provide. Ample provision was made for the immediate needs of the children in the two families and then Miss Goodfellow went on a shopping expedition and sent the Goodfellow Editor a list of the articles which she had purchased for their families. This list included girls' dresses, boys' suits, underwear

'WINGS' IS NEW FILM THRILL AT TREMONT

By LEO GAFFNEY

The mighty god of war is again astir in the films. This time he bounds off the ground, leaving the earth a tremble. He pierces the skies, leaving them aflame. His voice is the thunder, his sword forked lightning. The picture is "Wings" at the Tremont, Paramount's new aviation spectacle of the Great War. It is a [illegible] ent [illegible] ent, [illegible] nably, and it brings with it a [illegible] of names to be remembered.

Charles Rogers

George Monk Saunders wrote the story; William Wellman, a former Bostonian, directed; the principal players are Charles Rogers, Richard Arlen, Clara Bow and El Brendel.

"Wings" is best in the air. When the action [illegible] the ground the [illegible] it. In the battle scenes [illegible] the scudding [illegible] assumes [illegible] The same device [illegible] "[illegible]ones," which [illegible] to full stage [illegible] again employed. At these [illegible] the audience has a sense of being snatched from its seats and hurled through the icy [illegible] real[illegible] this sensation that you will want to cling to the chair to keep from flying off into an endless depth of space.

BACK TO EARTH.

After having been transported to the [illegible] time the earth seems [illegible] You have come back to earth and [illegible] is disturbing. Then "Wings" [illegible] of [illegible] You [illegible] the [illegible] must descend to the [illegible] familiar figures of [illegible] and comedians [illegible] feasts and [illegible]

[illegible] other big war films "Wings" [illegible] to a certain [illegible] The early sequences build up its characters and launch its sentiment. Thence it shapes its course to the first smash of battle—this is the semi-climax. For a breather and a change of emotional pace you are given a "leave" to Paris and an exhilarating taste of soldierboy revels. Back now to the fire-eating for the [illegible] climax of bitterly won victory. You pause here in unashamed tears for the precious dead. And then with the hero, you [illegible] to the soft, waiting arms of the heroine.

STARRY FLIGHTS.

Charles Rogers and Clara Bow are the [illegible] in the action. Miss Bow's role, that of a polite ambulance driver, is [illegible] in the second half of the production. She appears in unexplained fashion in the Parisian [illegible] and then is lost to the eye until the very end.

[illegible] and Richard Arlen are a sort of Damon and Pythias pair of [illegible] the latter of whom must meet [illegible] of an airman. Both these [illegible] are excellent; they will be [illegible] by this picture. El Brendel, [illegible] comedian, is elaborately [illegible] in the [illegible] character of [illegible] Patrick O'Brien.

The aerial moments of "Wings" are a whopping thrill. You see [illegible] flyers rush to battle like some great flame-spitting hawk. The motors drone of death, quick firing machine guns deliver it. The [illegible] pilot crumples in the cockpit, [illegible] in a gush of blood and the [illegible] plane drops to the far-away earth like a little paper fan thrown [illegible] from a window. This is the [illegible] of "Wings." It is a breath[illegible] adventure, a fling at the stars. Take it by all means—it is an exciting, exulting, exalting experience.

The widely read prize novel [illegible] Martha Ostenso, "Wild Geese," [illegible] now showing in film form at the Metropolitan where it shares headline honors with Mae Murray, "[illegible] person."

Contrary to expectations the film story follows closely this highly interesting and dramatic story of a phase of American farm life.

"Wild Geese" tells in vivid, broad strokes the story of the dwellers on a Minnesota farm the head of which, husband and father, is cruel, relentless and crushing. He uses his children as hired help, while he holds his wife in serfdom.

Things on this drab farm are brought to a sudden and dramatic climax when this son arrives on a neighboring farm and falls in love with a pretty school teacher who boards at the Gare farm.

The wife, wanting her child to be happy, struggles with the husband but he is adamant. Just as the exposure is about to take place, the husband meets death in a quick[illegible].

In addition to Belle Bennett the cast includes Anita Stewart, Russell Simpson, Eve Southern, Donald Keith, Jason Robards, Wesley Barry, Reta Rae, Evelyn Selbie and a host of others.

REVUE OPENS AT GAYETY

"Nothing But Girls," the new revue at the Gayety, is at least alluring if not entirely exact—inasmuch as there are also some talented men in the entertainment. However the majority of the cast is girls and generally attractive ones too.

Sam Raynor, an eccentric singing and dancing comedian, is the star of the occasion with your old friend Pat White and his "talented dog" close following as the featured favorite.

Elaine Beaslee

Jack Le Duc, Earl Root and Charles Cole are other men who prevent the score from being "Nothing But Girls." There are many clever sessions of comedy, no end of snappy songs, a great variety of dancing and about the best chorus of girls the season has disclosed. Elaine Beaselee, Billee La Monte and Adele Lewis are attractive principal girls.

Coming Events

Katharine Cornell in "The Letter" will move into the Plymouth next Monday afternoon.

"Out of the Night," one of those plays which guarantees goose flesh and tremors, comes to the Arlington next Monday.

"Cock Robin," in which murder and mystery abound, takes the stage at the Hollis next Monday.

"The Spider," a drama of mystery and suspense, will start its local engagement at the Majestic next Monday.

"Weather Clear, Track Fast," is announced as the attraction at the Arlington on Monday, January 9.

ESTELLE BUSY NOW, AFTER LONG LOAF

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 20.—The old adage, "It never rains but it pours," is literally true in the case of Estelle Taylor. For six long months, while she was under contract to United Artists, she made nary a picture. Now come offers galore, with Estelle all ready to answer the siren call of the camera. Wednesday she begins work at the Columbia studios.

I believe I told my public (my waiting public) that Harry Cohn's latest in filmland is an original story called "Lady Raffles," by Elmer Harris. The plot, as you have probably guessed, concerns a feminine member of the light fingered gentry.

And when Miss Taylor, or, if you prefer, Mrs. Jack Dempsey, finishes at Columbia, she starts work at the Fox studio on one of the feature pictures of the year.

William Boyd's public likes him in a uniform. Therefore, the Demille Company is going to see that the public is served. After wearing the natty outfit of a West Point cadet in "Dress Parade" and the khaki uniform of the American private in "Two Arabian Knights," Mr. Boyd is now learning how to look his best as a cop. He has been chosen, in other words, to star in "The Cop," modestly admitted by the Demille Company to be a big special production.

Donald Crisp, who regards this directorial appointment in the light of a Christmas gift, has been chosen to direct this epic of the cops.

The Marquis de Falaise, otherwise known to his friends as Hank, is traveling East on Tuesday. Don't be alarmed, he isn't leaving Hollywood during the gay and festive holiday season; he is only going as far as Kansas City to meet his wife, Gloria Swanson, who is returning West to spend Christmas with her husband and children. She will have her motion picture plans all set, the Marquis says, when she reaches here.

"But, tell me," begs Gloria's husband, "the name of the best hotel in Kansas City. You see, once I missed the train in that town, [illegible] I want to be prepared in case of an emergency."

In case you are interested, Charles Logue is writing a new crystallized, but [illegible] strong story, "The Heart of a Follies Girl," for Billie Dove. Sam Rork, who has assumed [illegible] of this production, appointed Mr. Logue to his task.

By the bye, speaking of First National, I heard [illegible] Carey Wilson, who has been under contract to this company for several years, is about to make new plans the first of the year. Mr. Wilson has been more than scenario writer; he has supervised, bossed and [illegible] out [illegible] most of the First National operas.

FRENCH ACTRESS IS FEATURED IN 'SPIDER'

An interesting member of the cast of "The Spider," which begins at the Majestic with a holiday matinee next Monday, is Germaine Giroux. When she created the part of Estelle, assistant to Chatrand, "The Great" in "The Spider," she was making her [illegible] upon the [illegible] speaking stage. And almost overnight she was established. Miss Giroux, however, came to the American stage with a stock round of [illegible] training second to none of our young actresses. She was born in France and came to Canada when quite young, making [illegible] in French theatricals in Montreal and later returning to France where she was installed as a prime favorite of the Grande Guignol and Comedie Francaise in Paris. She acted prominent roles in the French versions of "The Demi-Virgin," "The Sacrifice" and other successes.

Germaine Giroux

'OLD KENTUCKY' OFFERING AT STATE

"In Old Kentucky," a racing melodrama which was given its first Boston showing at Loew's State yesterday, brings to the screen two [illegible] faces and sees the return of Wesley Barry, who has been out of pictures during the last two years. James Murray, a newcomer to the screen, carries the difficult masculine lead with the ease of a veteran and evinces a natural instinct for acting. He has personality and good looks.

Helene Costello

Helene Costello proves her beauty and acting ability as the featured feminine player while Wesley Barry is the jockey and plays an important part in the story.

The picture, based on an original screen play by A. P. Younger, is said to have been suggested by the Dazey play. It resembles that old favorite of the speaking stage, yet it is far better from an entertainment standpoint because it has been modernized.

On the stage are presented the Yale Collegians, student entertainers, Don Lydon and Thelma Farman and Bert Darrell.

VARIETY SHOW AT ST. JAMES

A special anniversary program was given last evening at the St. James.

With the box office on the stage and the players sitting in the audience one didn't know which way to turn to find the exit. But that didn't stop the hilarity, as each player proved his or her versatility by doing a vaudeville sketch.

Clara Joel, as Toinette, the sales girl, and also as the great Fleur De Lys, proved that she was not only gifted as an actress but that she could sing in a most appealing manner.

Frank Charlton did the honors in the way of "introducing" each player. The repartee between him and Schofield in the audience brought forth gales of laughter.

TWO FEET OF SNOW IN NORTHERN VERMONT

St. Albans, Vt., Dec. 20 (A.P.)—More than two feet of snow blankets the Northern section of Vermont today as the result of the second big storm of the month.

Highway travel into outlying districts is difficult although [illegible] and railroad trains were on schedule today.

Continuing Shows

WILBUR—Helen Ford in "Peggy Ann." Musical comedy of grotesque and phantom-like situations.

COPLEY—"The Ghost Train," [illegible] of Mr. Clive's perennials. Shocks and laughs are distributed with fine holiday spirit.

COLONIAL—Marilyn Miller in "Rosalie." Jack Donahue, nimble hoofer, also has much to do with its delights.

SHUBERT—"My Maryland," an operetta. An inspiring Civil War incident set to good music by Sigmund Romberg.

COMEDY FILM AT ORPHEUM

Two American soldiers and an Arab girl are the principals in "Two Arabian Knights," post-war comedy drama, showing this week at Loew's Orpheum.

The story is concerned with the highly amusing experiences of a rich young private and a hard-boiled first sergeant, fated to be buddies throughout a series of hilarious adventures, though they had been natural enemies.

William Boyd and Louis Wolheim give fine portrayals as the two doughboys, and Mary Astor makes a charming Arab girl who causes most of the trouble.

Loew's vaudeville offers as [illegible] headline act Walter Fehl and company in a smart music and dance act entitled "His Magic Wand," featuring Estelle Dennies and a lively jazz band.

Lew Kelly and Cliff Hall present a comedy number called "Kellyisms." Other acts include Ulis and Clark in a pleasing sketch, Boardman and Rowland in a song recital, and Poets brothers and sister in pantomime.

FLO LEWIS AND 'FRISCO' HITS AT B. F. KEITH'S

Flo Lewis' act at Keith's is called "Give Us a Hitch." Flo, assisted by Sam Coslow, gives many laughs in return for the hitch. She is a true comedienne.

One of the most pretentious numbers of the year was given by Margaret Severn with Lucille Neal at the piano, Ann Playing the 'cello and Gwyneth Neal the violin. The music was by Henry Sullivan, and the lyrics by Thomas McKnight.

"Joe" Frisco, his cigar and his derby made everybody laugh.

GERMANS OPEN WORLD'S MOST POWERFUL STATION

Berlin, Dec. 20 (A.P.)—A new broadcasting station described as the most powerful in the world, was opened today at Zeesen, twenty miles outside of Berlin.

The new station has the enormous power of 1.0 kilowatts, contrasted with the nine kilowatts of the next largest German station and a wave length of 1,.50 metres. All Europe is expected to come within the range of the station.

GOOD COMEDY FILM SHOWN AT BOSTON

This is the time of year when the filling of stockings is pertinent. The Keith-Albee Boston this week offers "Silk Stockings"—full of fun and Laura La Plante. This debonair young woman of the type gentlemen prefer is an entertaining a comedienne as she is good looking. She carries all the gay humor of a swift-moving farce on her own white shoulders. Adequately assisting her is John Harron as her husband and Otis Harlan as the benign and helpful lawyer who sees the tempestuous young couple through their domestic vicissitudes.

Laura La Plante

A strange and suggestive pair of lustrous hose adorning the breast pocket of the husband where should drape gracefully a spotless and innocent handkerchief is quite sufficient to assure the shrewish Laura that she had better be separated from him. In a hilarious court scene she describes with roguish pantomime the mythical cruelty of her husband, and wins from the susceptible judge an interlocutory degree for one year.

The rest of the picture is devoted to Laura's attempts to be compromised by her husband so that the decree might be made null and void.

TOM MIX FILM IS EXCITING AT SCOLLAY

Tom Mix, one of western heroes, is again thrilling his many fans in his new Fox Films production, "Tumbling River," now at the Scollay. It is a typical Mix picture, a blazing drama of the colorful west, filled with new hazards and daring, combined with romance and humor.

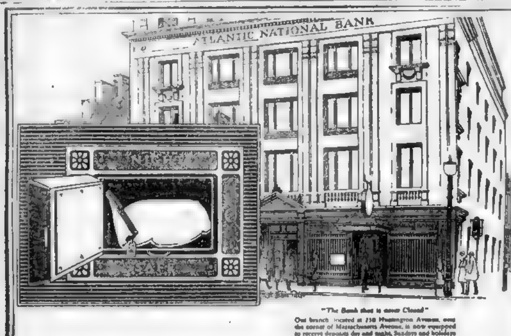

Tom Mix

Tom plays the role of Tom Gray, owner of a stock ranch and connoisseur of fine horses. His two prize horses are Tony and Buster. It is then that the action begins.

A gang of the most notorious horse thieves in the country rustle Buster, one of the horses. Tom is infuriated, and he and Tony start out with the determination not to stop until they have run down the villains.

With Tom in a well known cast are Dorothy Dwan, who portrays Edna; Wallace MacDonald, who plays the "heavy," and William Conklin, Stella Essex, Elmo Billings, Edward Peil, Sr., Buster Gardner and Harry Gripp. Lew Seiler directed the production.

All-Star Soccer Team for Olympics Would Find Hub Represented

This is the fifth of a series of articles on New England athletes who may represent the United States in the 1928 Olympic games.

By JOE CASHMAN

SOCCER football is one of the fastest growing and most popular sports in the United States, and the thousands of local lovers of the game are doubtless anxious to learn whether any New England players have a chance to compete in the Olympics.

It is impossible to enlighten them on this point at present, for the very good reason that there may be no soccer competition at Amsterdam, because of the controversy raging among various countries over eligibility rules.

And if it should be decided finally to hold competition in this sport, it will even then be impossible to comment with any degree of accuracy on New England's chances of representation until the U. S. Olympic Soccer committee decides whether the National Amateur Challenge Cup winners or an all-star team will be sent across.

If the governing body decides to send the title team intact as the standard bearer of the Stars and Stripes, New England players will be left out in the cold; but should an all-star team be named, as was the case in 1924, a few local stars might make the trip.

THE question of the hour, of course, is whether any soccer will be played at the Olympics.

The International Olympic Committee and the International Federation of Football Associations are at odds over the interpretation of the rules regarding amateurism. Unless the breach is healed, the former body, which is in control of all Olympic sports, will rule soccer out of the picture, despite the fact that it is the only competition at the games which is a success financially.

At the Olympic Congress at Prague in 1925, it was ruled that no competitor who accepts money for wages lost for participation in the international games would be permitted to engage in any Olympic event.

Then at the congress of Football Federations at Rome in 1926, it was voted to permit amateur players to receive compensation for loss of wages in exceptional cases.

THIS ruling is directly opposed to that of the Olympic governing body and unless one side or the other gives in, there will be no Olympic soccer.

Since the Rome decision, however, the president of the International Olympic Committee has stated that, in his opinion, a player who receives compensation may remain an amateur in the event that the money is turned over to his family.

That may be the final solution of the question, but the Olympic body has taken no action on the suggestion of its head, and until it does, an official representation of soccer at the Olympics is questionable.

The American Olympic committee, apparently, is of the opinion that soccer will be played at Amsterdam for it is now seriously engaged in deliberating on the kind of team to send.

America entered a soccer team in the Olympics for the first time in 1924, when an all-star eleven went over, and after beating Esthonia in the first game, was eliminated in the second round by Uruguay, world champion team.

THE coaches felt that the United States would have fared much better had a team that had been playing together for some time been picked instead of the all-star aggregation.

This is the reason that the U. S. Olympic committee is thinking seriously of sending an eleven intact to Amsterdam.

They would probably have decided to do this long ago but for the fact that there is hardly an amateur team in the country composed entirely of naturalized Americans.

Most of the great soccer players in this country, both pro and pure, are Scotch, and the majority of them are not American citizens and consequently are ineligible to represent this country in Olympic competition.

There is, however, an all-American born team in St. Louis. If that club shows up well, it will probably be sent to Amsterdam.

Otherwise, an all-star team will again be selected and New England players will fight for the places.

One New England boy played on the last U. S. Olympic soccer team. He is Freddy O'Connor, center halfback of the Lynn General Electric team, who was born and has always lived in the Shoe City.

O'Connor is still playing for the G. E. eleven and while he is no longer considered the outstanding amateur performer in this section he stands a fine chance of making the trip again, providing an all-star team is chosen.

The local player who is believed to stand the best chance of making an all-star team is Jackie McAllister, clever outside left of the Clan Robertson team. This youngster was born in Belfast, Ireland, in 1907 and came to this country when he was three years old. He is a naturalized citizen of the United States and is rated as one of the greatest "pure" players in the land today.

Another promising candidate is Jack McGonnigle of Weymouth, who plays right halfback for Fore River. McGonnigle was born in Scotland but has been naturalized and promises to be a strong contender for a place on the team.

OTHER star local players who might possibly make the team are Joseph "Red" Doherty, a native of Scotland, who plays for Fore River, and Frank "Potts" Kennedy, a Lynn General Electric player and a football and baseball star of note.

With such men as these fighting for places, New England is almost sure of representation, if an all-star team is selected.

George M. Collins, a Hub newspaper man, managed the team in 1924, and will probably do so again.

Title or all-star team, the United States doesn't figure to grab off many points in soccer competition. Soccer is the national sport in most of the countries of Europe, South America and the United Kingdom, and all these countries have star teams composed solely of native-born talent who play together all the year round.

No American eleven can possibly hope to cope with the sort of competition that awaits it at the Olympics any more than a baseball team from any other country, with the possible exception of Canada, could expect to turn back a first-class American nine.

American-born soccer players, however, are improving by leaps and bounds and before many Olympics, the elevens of this country should be able to hold their own with the best in the world.

The next article of this series will appear on Thursday.

STUDENTS WANT BASKETBALL AT HEIGHTS

By JOHN B. GILLOOLY

Boston College will bring basketball back into its category of major sports next year. The court game abandoned by B. C. four years ago, is so popular among the undergraduates at the Heights that the authorities feel they should resume this sport once more.

The Eagle always had good fives and drew large crowds to their contests. Why the hoop game was ever dropped from the sporting list at B. C. is still a mystery. No other reason was given except that the St. Mary's Gym, where the team practised, was in Cambridge and the Cantab City was thought too distant.

There was something else to the dropping of the basketball sport, besides this. It was never made known. Nine chances out of ten it was a financial reason. Basketball is a hard sport to put across in any college without a gym which would eliminate the hiring of a court.

B. C.'s athletic treasury hasn't increased sufficiently to warrant the resumption of this sport. But there is a strong undercurrent among the students at the Heights for basketball and it appears more than likely that the hoop game would be put across if B. C. decides to adopt the Winter pastime once more.

Raise $50,000 at Charity Show

Chicago, Dec. 20 (A.P.).—Two European heavyweights clashed in a Chicago ring for the first time last night and Ted Sandwina of Germany, in his second American appearance, was knocked out in the second round by Otto von Porat of Norway.

They topped a boxing program which raised $50,000 for Christmas baskets and toys for the poor and many of the society, political and business leaders attended.

Benny Kid Carter of Phoenix Mexican featherweight, won over Tony Mandell of Boston in the fastest of the seven matches on the card.

NEW YORK FANS TIRE OF BOXING

Rickard Plans to Rest Heavies Until Outdoor Season Rolls Around

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

New York, Dec. 20.—There appeared to be more than a possibility today that Tex Rickard would declare all bets sold to the ragman on his heavyweight circus this Winter and, folding his tent like the Arabs, silently take it on the flat of his feet out into the night until times are better and saps more plentiful.

The sap is supposed to run better in the Spring, anyhow, and it is figured that a guy like that might start running toward a box office, not knowing any better. Right now, he seems to be running home every night and the supposition is that he does it to save car fare.

HEAVIES NOT DRAWING.

Anyhow, a lot of people appear to be turning up absent every time they have a boxing show in New York and so the good word is that Rickard simply won't tolerate it much longer. It takes plenty of money to pay off a heavyweight and, somehow, the boy friend has gotten out of the habit of using his own.

Therefore, they say, he may call off his heavyweight program, or whatever may be left of it, until the outdoor season, meaning that the Sharkey-Heeney fight may be due for another ride on the old carousal—around and around and around.

This fight was postponed some weeks ago because Sharkey injured the cuticle on one of his hands very severely.

A recent bulletin from Boston carried the information that he had resumed training, which caused so much cheering that it could be heard distinctly in the next room. The idea all along has been that one postponement or several might be necessary before the populace could work itself up to the point where paying became a pleasure, a state of mind rarely achieved outside of the saloon that used to be on the corner and is now on the second floor rear behind a peep hole and a push buttn.

MAY BOX OUTDOORS.

At that, the Sharkey-Heeney affair becomes an outdoor shot in the event that the boys adhere to their present plan of tossing Dempsey in with Tunney again without further preamble.

Rickard, of course, is not outlining his plans from a soap box at high noon. He has informally scheduled the Sharkey-Heeney fight for early in January and maybe he will see his way clear to go through with it then. But the chances are he won't; that is, not unless there is more local enthusiasm for the proceedings displayed.

Postponement of Go News to Sharkey

If the Sharkey-Heeney bout, scheduled for next month, is to be called off, the local boxer knows nothing about it. Jack is hard at work in the gym preparing for the bout.

He informed the Boston Evening American in an interview more than a week ago that he expected it to be held on scheduled time.

If the tussle is postponed, it will not be the fault of either of the fighters.

Jones to Attend "Champions" Dinner

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 20 (A.P.).—Bobby Jones has accepted an invitation to attend the "champions' dinner" to be held at New York, January 4, it was announced today.

The dinner is being given by the Madison Square Garden Club and will be attended by such notables as Gene Tunney, William T. Tilden and Babe Ruth.

STASIAK IS EJECTED FROM OLD HOWARD

Stanley Stasiak was ejected from the Old Howard Theatre.

The trouble was caused by the fact that Joe Bull Komar is meeting all comers at the Howard this week. Stasiak, who has formerly held this job, claims that he was engaged for the work this week.

Paul Bowser claims he wired Stasiak three times while the big Pole was South, but received no answer to his offers. Komar charges Stasiak was afraid to meet him.

Stasiak entered the theatre and when Komar was introduced became excited and threatened to stop the show, by force. He was ejected from the theatre by three officers but threatens to return today and take legal steps against Bowser and Komar.

This afternoon Komar meets Andy Brown, while Ned McGuire meets Ivan Lallos. Tonight Komar will meet Joe Rogacki in a return bout while Cora Livingston, world's champion lady wrestler, will meet Miss Betty Bushy, the famous girl swimmer who has decided to take a whirl at the mat game.

RICKARD HELPS OLYMPIC FUND

New York, Dec. 20.—Substantial contribution toward financing the American Olympic boxing team for its trip to Amsterdam next Summer, was announced by the Madison Square Garden Club, otherwise known as Tex Rickard's "600 Millionaires," in connection with the club's first annual "all-champions" dinner on Jan. 4.

The committee in charge of the dinner already has subscribed $[illegible] toward the Olympic fund and expects to double that amount as a demonstration of its interests in amateur as well as professional boxing.

With the idea of showing the "600 millionaires" and their guests the type of amateur boxers having their support, the Amateur Athletic Union will stage six bouts, bringing together 12 prospective Olympic team candidates, as an entertainment feature of the dinner.

Winchester vs. Lexington

Winchester High School will give the Lexington High School basketball quintet their first test at Lexington tonight.

RUNYON Says

By DAMON RUNYON

IT appears that our famous service institutions, the Army and Navy, may sever football relations, which will be a terrible blow to those Congressmen who have been accustomed to peddling their tickets at a profit. However, it is apt to prove a big relief to two prominent members of the animal kingdom.

I refer to the Army Mule and the Navy Goat. I never heard them mentioned by any specific names, though I suppose they call the Navy Goat William, because it is that kind of a goat. And my experience among the muleteers of the Army gives me the impression that all Army Mules are known as "Hey, you so-and-so."

In any event, year in and year out, the Army Mule and the Navy Goat have been dragged from their peaceful ruminations at the stables at West Point and Annapolis, caparisoned in gay blankets and hauled up and down the sidelines of some football field by enthusiastic young gentlemen [illegible] whatever for the [illegible] of a mulish and goatish old age.

I never could see any particular purpose in visiting these [illegible] upon a fine old William [illegible] a splendid old mule, and I [illegible] persons close to the Army Mule and the Navy Goat that these [illegible] resent the custom [illegible] are particularly humiliated so I am informed, by being forced to pose together every year for O[illegible] and Izzy Kaplan, and the other photographers of the press.

"If the papers want pictures of a Goat and a Mule," the Navy Goat is quoted as saying, "why don't they pose Ironsides and Izzy together?"

BUT it looks as if the trials and tribulations of the Army Mule and the Navy Goat are over for a time, at least. They may not meet again on a hostile field and I am privately informed that it is the sentiment of the Army Mule that if he never sees that Navy Goat as long as he lives, that will be too soon.

"He uses a terrible perfume," the Army Mule is reported to have said. "I much prefer the society of the Yale Bulldog."

The Navy is insisting on a three-year eligibility rule. It contends that it is unfair for the Army to play those football old gentlemen who drift into the institution up the Hudson after some years of gridiron experience in other colleges, whereas the Navy players are young chaps of no great amount of football seasoning.

It is an old, old argument that has been going on a long time, but the Army's return of the contract for the 1928 game, unsigned, is the first definite step toward the abandonment of the famous annual game, commonly referred to by our football writers as "the [illegible] classic."

It has always been the [illegible] [illegible] when I get [illegible] of the Navy [illegible] Army [illegible] the Army-Navy [illegible] It [illegible] one [illegible]

MARTINEZ DAZZLES FANS

Scores Easy Win Over Billy Algers; Prelims Crowded With Lively Action

By JACK CONWAY

Hilario Martinez, Spanish Junior welterweight, came and conquered. He had a wide margin on Billy Algers of Pheonix, Arizona in their ten-round bout at an Argonne A. A. show at Mechanics Building.

Martinez displayed dazzling boxing class. He moved around the ring with grace and precision, while he counted with crisp hard punches.

FITCHBURG FIVE AFTER TITLE

Chicago, Dec. 20 (A.P.).—If the Pittsburgh Panthers can do as well in later games with Purdue and Ohio State, they may lay claim to the basketball championship of the Big Ten. Iowa was the Panthers fourth Big Ten victim in five days, falling before the speed of the Pittsburghers 44 to 40, last night.

The Easterners have made a distinct success of their week-end invasion of the western conference, defeating Michigan, Chicago and Northwestern on three successive nights and beating Iowa after a stern contest although the Iowans forced the Panthers into an overtime session.

A. A. U. Supports Capital Ring Bill

The Amateur Athletic Union through its national secretary, Daniel J. Ferris, announced through the Associated Press its support of a bill to legalize amateur boxing in the District of Columbia, where the lid has been clamped on ring activities of all description for some time.

The measure, according to the A. A. U., is sponsored by Representative Updike and Senator Watson of Indiana.

PASSING THE PUCK

By Bill Grimes

President Charles C. Clapp can make or break the Canadian-American League by his decision on the Newsy LaLonde case. LaLonde, who is the manager-coach and part owner of the Quebec team, assaulted Referee Sonny Foley and Player Fonzi Contant after Saturday night's Tiger-Quebec game. Referee Foley has the power to levy a heavy fine on LaLonde, while President Clapp can both fine and indefinitely suspend him.

If President Clapp fails to make an example of LaLonde, which would be an indication that he does not stand behind and protect his referees, the league is doomed. With the LaLonde case in mind, the players and managers will feel that there is no ... to their actions against officials. Unless the managers and players are positively certain that the referee's decisions will be backed up by the league, they are sure to run wild.

The Quebec team has been a troublesome outfit since the Canadian-American League was organized. It is not necessary that there [redacted] a Canadian team in the league. The promoters incorporated before they had signed a Canadian team, and to save expense after they had been given a "run around" by a couple of Montreal magnates, through Joe Page, admitted Quebec.

Realizing that they had the whip hand, the Quebec backers drove a hard margin with the Canadian-American League. They insisted upon a $3,000 guarantee from the league to help defray expenses to the states and in return agreed to give Boston and Springfield a percentage of their gates. The money that the Tigers have brought back from Quebec City has been hard earned, for the players have risked their lives playing in that city. Hockey as played in Quebec is a detriment to the game and the Beavers should be replaced by an American representative, such as Hartford, Syracuse, Albany or Buffalo.

There are rumors afloat in Buffalo that a professional hockey team representing that city will join the Canadian Professional League next season. It would be to the advantage of the Can.-Am. organization to approach the Bison City promoters with a proposition to join an American professional league.

After the bombardment he took from the Philadelphia Arrows, Jakie Forbes, the Providence goalie, probably has a more wholesome respect for the Canadian-American League shots. Jakie was meeting with great success in the nets of the Rhode Island Reds, until Frock Lowery beat him three times in the Quaker City. To add to Jakie's dismay, Earl Robinson also scored.

All that is needed to make the setting perfect is to have President Calder of the N. H. L. appoint Jerry LaFlamme as reference in tonight's game betwen the Bruins and Ottawa.

At that Jerry LaFlamme's resignation would not be a marker to what is in store for Newsy LaLonde on his next appearance at the Arena. Sonny Foley is far too popular with his Cambridge pals to allow LaLonde's actions to pass unnoticed.

Coach Mickles, the former McGill University star, who is coaching the Harvard freshman squar, had more than 100 candidates out for the opening practice session. It was by far the largest gathering of hockeyists and near hockeyists ever tossed at any coach.

Although the Tigers are one of the best road attractions in the Canadian-American League, they fail to draw at home. The Tigers play hard hockey and are a bunch of hustlers, who, if properly supported would show to even better advantage at the Arena. Probably the fans prefer "actors" to hockey players, and if such is the case, the management should go out and get some thrill producers.

Hockey Stars

JIMMIE HERBERTS

Bruins

Under the management of William Hitchman Pickens, Jimmie Herberts would be the Babe Ruth of hockey. Sailor Jim is one of the most colorful players hockey ever produced. His love for the game is responsible for much of the daring he displays.

Jimmy Herberts

There is nothing more sensational than a Herberts' "burst" down the ice, his dive through a defense and his shot. Herberts has an abundance of speed ... races at the defense, regardless of the consequences, and it is not uncommon to see him clash into the nets or the end boards after he has let fly a shot.

Herberts has been the rating star with the Bruins since that team was brought here. He is the only survivor of the original batch of players brought here to represent Boston in the N. H. L.

He was alternated with Carson Cooper at right wing during the first season, as Stan Jackson was assigned to center ice. Finally Herberts was moved to center, and with Cooper began to gain well-earned recognition. Herberts is a scorer. He finished last season two points behind Harry Oliver, who led the ... with 34 points.

Jack Delaney Is Anxious to Box

(A.P.).—Jack Delaney, former light heavyweight champion, is said to be looking for work. At his home in Bridgeport, Ct., he trains daily and gets in a round of golf nearly every morning at Beardsley Park.

He has instructed his manager, Pete Reilly, to book several "training" bouts to put him in shape before he meets the winner of the Sharkey-Heeney bout on February 12 at Madison Square Garden.

PLAYERS FINED FOR FIGHTING

Scrapping during and after Canadian-American League games will be quickly suppressed if the heavy fines meted out by President Charles C. Clapp have the desired effect.

Following the Providence-Philadelphia game at Philadelphia Saturday night a fracas developed in which players and spectators were involved.

Vernon Forbes, the Providence goalie, and Steve Yankowski, the Philadelphia defense player, were each fined $25 for their run-in. President Clapp also fined Frock Lowery of Philadelphia, and Wilfred Deay of Providence $15 each for their part in the Philly affair.

President Clapp has yet to hear the Lalonde side of the trouble which followed the Boston Tigers-Quebec game here Saturday night and will have to defer action until this report is received.

BIG INTER-CITY AMATEUR SHOW HERE JAN. 23

The first big intercity amateur boxing tournament of the season was clinched yesterday by the N. E. A. A. U. to be staged at the Boston Arena, Monday evening, January 3.

With six cities included in the event and with William H. Cuddy of the St. Joseph's T. A. S. named as manager of the tournament, it is expected that the followers of the simon pures, who have had little to enthuse over since the national championships last year will turn out en masse.

The cream of Hub amateurs, who have kept busy during the past few months, will face the pick of the simon pures of the country.

The cities to participate in the tournament include Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Connecticut Association and Toronto. The presence of the Canadian city in the tournament will give the event an international flavor.

In selecting the Arena for this first tournament of the season, the committee in charge of the event expects to stage a tournament which will attract the greatest crowd that ever attended an amateur event here with the single exception of the nationals.

The selection of the Hub boxers will be made from various tournaments to be held in the city during the next few weeks, and although many of last year's stars have graduated to professional ranks, many newcomers with considerable ability have made their appearance during the past couple of months, and no doubt they will win representation on the team.

The N. E. A. A. U. has opened a downtown ticket office for the accommodation of the fans at room 315, 333 Washington street. Telephone Liberty 8707.

Heavy Entry List for B. A. A. Tourney

Tom Kanaly reports he has received a large list of entries for the open amateur boxing tournament of the B. A. A. which will be staged at the Unicorn Club's headquarters on Exeter street tomorrow night.

The B. A. A. has always been a leader in fostering amateur boxing and its shows have been some of the best put on in New England.

PLAYERS' NEAT TRIBUTE TO DENNIS GILDEA

In recognition of his services of the past season, Dennis Gildea, coach of the Everett High School eleven, was surprised with a framed testimonial, presented by Captain Angelo DiMont in Rockwood Auditorium of the Senior High School. The certificate, which was signed by all members of the football squad, was a summary in praise of the coach's untiring work in the school's behalf.

In his speech of acceptance, Mr. Gildea thanked the squad and lauded both the loyalty of the team and the girls, whose support was no small factor in the year's success.

Inside Golf

By Chester Horton

How golf is growing can be appreciated by some new golf facts. In Chicago, last July Fourth, four[redacted] new golf courses were opened in one day. This is a record for the moment, but shortly it will have about the same relation to golf growth as the first flight of the Wrights has to air mails and ocean non-stop flights. There are now estimated to be approximately 4,000,000 niblick-pushers in this broad land, and some 4,000 golf courses. Beginning with a single golf course in 1884, there are now more courses than there are baseball league teams. And it is not unreasonable to assume that all this will double within five years. More men and women play golf than have ever played any other sport the country has developed, and farmers everywhere near cities and towns now survey their fields with an eye to harvesting a golf course. Mr. A. Golfer, the tradesman, keeps his shelves stocked with a fine line of goods—and a customer never has been known to quit him.

MR. BOSTON

By Jack Conway

"I WISH you would make it VERY STRONG that it is TACK and not TACKS Hardwick."

An indignant young man was in earnest conversation with Mr. Boston at the B. A. A.

"Tack is O. K. Coakley with me," went on the youthful citizen, "but I get burned up when I am referred to as Tacks. Now that I have got that off my chest I'm going to drop in and ask Santa Claus to send Harvard a winning football team."

"How do you keep in such remarkable physical condition?" Mr. Boston asked the greatest athlete Harvard has ever had.

"By doing very little exercise, I guess," laughed the Crimson three letter [redacted]. "When I graduated over at Cambridge, I at first used to ex[redacted] regularly. Then I went into business and didn't find so much time for exercise. The other day I noticed I was putting on weight around my waist line and so hurried up here to the B. A. A. for a game of squash."

"I notice you are still interested in athletics," resumed Mr. Boston.

"It's in the blood," laughed Hardwick. "That's why I went into this new sport arena with Rickard. I have always had confidence enough in Boston to believe it is big enough for the world's greatest sport arena.

"If Boston folks are given first class attractions, they will patronize them. All blue ribbons events here have been sellouts. Boston people won't turn out for inferior shows. It is not our intention to put on anything but the very best attractions at our new arena."

Hardwick then hurried off in the direction of the indoor squash courts.

"THERE'S my idea of a great athlete," said Mr. Boston to Tom Kanaly, athletic director of the B. A. A., who came along at this point.

"I was once discussing the relative values of several star football players with the late Percy Haughton, famous Harvard coach," resumed the veteran, "and the name of Tack Hardwick was mentioned.

"'There's the greatest football player I ever coached,' declared Haughton with enthusiasm. 'Hardwick was an all-American end, but he played tackle and halfback equally as well. That fellow could do anything on a football field.

"'The reason for Hardwick's greatness was the fact he worked for the success of the team. He didn't care what Hardwick did as long as Harvard won. He played on three Crimson elevens which defeated Yale.'

"It was perhaps natural for Hardwick to play football as his father was a famous Crimson halfback in the 80's.

"Tack prepared for Harvard at Groton where he didn't attract particular attention as an athlete. It was in his freshman year at Cambridge that he first sparkled.

"While at Harvard he also went in for baseball and track sports. In 1912 he won a 14 inning baseball game from Yale by cracking out a [redacted] run.

"TACK never went in for gym exercises. Despite this, he dropped around to Hemenway gym one afternoon and shattered the Harvard strength test records.

"As a football player, Hardwick only had one rival at Harvard. He [redacted] Eddie Mahan who was as much at home on the gridiron as Babe Ruth is on the diamond. There have been many heated debates among football men as to whether Hardwick or Mahan was the greatest football star.

"Charley Brickley won fame as a drop kicker. In this line, he was in a class by himself. For all-round playing ability, though, Hardwick and Mahan are generally classed ahead of Brickley.

"I HOPE Hardwick persuades Santa Claus to slip Harvard a winning football team. Things have changed a great deal over at the stadium since the days when Hardwick, Mahan, Brickley, Casey, Owen and other famous heroes were leading the thundering herd of Crimson pigskin stars to fame and glory.

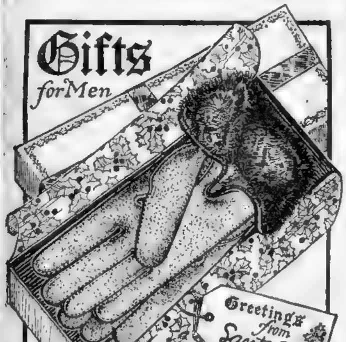

"Meanwhile I'll try and remember it is Tack and not Tacks Hardwick."

Decorating Table for Christmas

By MARTHA LEE.

DECORATING your Christmas dinner table is as jolly a task as playing Santa Claus to the Christmas tree. Just as you decorate the tree with garlands that provide an artistic setting and then place upon it the final bright spots of color, so should you make your table an artistic setting for colorful foods.

Since red and green are the prescribed colors, why not make our foods a charming combination of these? First, let us lay the table. Snowy damask is preferable to tinted linens for the Christmas dinner because our scheme provides plenty of bright splashes of color that are best offset by the pure white background.

Softly gleaming silver candlesticks —or glass ones—hold tapering red candles flanking the centerpieces. No Christmas centerpiece is quite so fitting as a miniature tree, drenched with silver rain as its sole trimming.

Since we all like to make something of a party of Christmas dinner place cards may be used. These may be tied to amusing toys for favors, if you wish to add some fun to the occasion. If the dinner is more formal a single red rose bud with the stem thrust through the card is attractive.

Here is a "red and green" menu, planned to serve eight persons:

MENU
Grapefruit and Cherry Cocktail
Olives Celery
Roast Goose or Duck Garnished with Pineapple
Glazed Beets Buttered Spinach
Pimento Cup Salad
Plum Pudding
Red and Green Mints Mixed Nuts
Coffee

Grapefruit and Cherry Cocktail Place in the refrigerator to get very cold, one No. 2 can of grapefruit or two cups of fresh grapefruit, one cup green grapes and one cup red pitted canned cherries. Cut grapes in halves and remove seeds. Arrange in eight cocktail glasses, placing several of the cherries on top. Pour over the juice from the can of grapefruit. Serve at once, garnished with a sprig of mint or holly.

Roast Goose or Duck, Garnished with Pineapple: Roast the goose or duck in the usual manner and when it is done to a golden brown, place it in the centre of a large platter and garnish with slices of pineapple which have been drained from the syrup, dried on a towel, and then sauted in butter until delicately browned. On each slice of pineapple place a small mold of cranberry jelly (this comes jellied to a nice consistency in cans).

Glazed Beets: Drain small canned beets from their juice and dry on cheesecloth. Prick lightly with a fork. Melt three tablespoons butter, add two tablespoons sugar, add the beets and cook for twenty minutes, using an asbestos mat under the saucepan toward the latter part of the cooking.

Buttered Spinach: Either fresh or canned spinach may be used, adding a generous amount of butter just before serving.

Pimento Cup Salad: Drain eight canned pimentoes and sprinkle the inside very slightly with salt. Marinate one cup celery crescents, one cup diced orange for half an hour in French dressing. Add one cup pecan meats and moisten with mayonnaise. Fill the pimentoes and place in the centre of individual nests of shredded lettuce.

Plum Pudding may be bought ready prepared and is very delicious if the can is heated for a long time in boiling water so that the pudding is thoroughly heated through. Top with whipped cream and a sprig of holly, just before serving.

Yours for a decorative dinner.

The Dance Hall Question

By Beatrice Fairfax,
An Authority on the Problems of Love and Marriage.

WITHOUT doubt some "nice" girls do go to public dance halls unescorted as well as to showy [illegible] and dance with unknown men. But a girl whose entrance [illegible] [illegible] leads [illegible] [illegible] usually assumes [illegible] an apologetic or defiant manner in admitting she does so. And she is always careful to state that she pays for her own "refreshments" and [illegible].

Peggy and Bobby bring up the old discussion in the following letter, taking opposite views of the question.

Dear Miss Fairfax—Is it proper for a girl 16 years old to attend public dances unescorted? Peggy says it is, because she meets many young men she knows at these dances. I say it isn't, because she doesn't know what kind of a crowd she gets into, and when she is once there she will [illegible] dance with anyone who asks her.

Dear Peggy and Bobby—that's just the one [illegible] [illegible] settle [illegible]. In the long run [illegible] will have to settle [illegible] and [illegible] questions [illegible] come along [illegible] to your own conscience and convictions.

But I will gladly tell you what I think about girls going to public dance halls. And [illegible] of reasoning happens to clarify the question for you, I shall be very glad.

A nice girl—like Peggy, for instance—may go to public dance halls and escape from harm. She may be clever enough to be able to distinguish between decent young men who attend and those who are cads.

But she faces dual dangers in going to such a place. A girl who deliberately rushes into danger will most likely be to face the consequences sooner or later. And [illegible] is apt to have much sympathy with she does.

[illegible] and [illegible] declare that [illegible] girls will not go unescorted to cabarets and dance halls. As a rule when a nice girl does go, some of the men she meets there are likely to take her for a girl who is not nice or particular, and treat her and talk about her accordingly. Why should a self-respecting girl care to run such a chance.

The EDISON SHOPS

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
I am about to be married and one of my friends has planned a shower in my home. I have never attended a shower. Will you please tell me how I should act when the presents are given to me? Also what should I say? MARGIE.

AS simply and sincerely as possible thank each guest for her thoughtfulness and for her present, as that present is presented to you. Something like this is appropriate: "How very kind of you to think so beautifully of me. What a glorious vase —such a wondrous color and design," [illegible] "You are most kind, Mrs. Walker. How did you know that I have dreamed of having a portfolio, though of course I never thought that I should own such a lovely one?" or, "Isn't this book characteristic of your lovely taste? And at last I own a complete set of Shelley!"

In other words, thank honestly for the friendliness and thoughtfulness that prompted the sending of the gift, that urged your friend to bring something that she planned for your happiness, and then say something as appreciative as possible—and definite, too—about the gift itself, mentioning it by name, and not vaguely saying "your gift." Before you go to the shower, get yourself in the frame of mind that understands the sweetness, the care, the careful budgeting, perhaps, of a personal account, the amount of shopping, and the charming taste that was put into the choice of each gift. Then thank for that. Be appreciative, dear friend, and that will make the givers see that you are a kindly-intentioned person yourself.

And, don't forget that, besides this expression of thanks, which must necessarily be very hasty, you should write to each giver the next day or a few days after, a note of thanks for her gift.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
Will you kindly give me your valued opinion in the following matter:

To whom should the honor of maid of honor be given? The bride-to-be has an aunt who is also a member of her household. The groom-to-be has a sister. The aunt is also a young woman, about the same age as this sister, a trifle older perhaps Both are unmarried.

The brother of the groom-to-be will be best man. M. P.

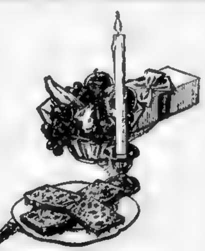

HAS the bride a sister? If so, she should be invited to be the maid of honor. But if the bride has no sister and if the aunt is the "best friend" of the bride, the bride should by all means invite her to be maid of honor. There is no reason why she should invite the sister of the groom-to-be in preference to inviting her own aunt. It is correct that the groom invite his brother to be his best man. And it is correct for the bride to invite whom she wishes to be her maid of honor. To have the groom's brother attend him as best man, and to ask the groom's sister to attend the bride as maid of honor would certainly make the wedding seem to be the "groom's wedding" instead of the "bride's wedding." It would be over-balanced.

W. R. HEARST REPLIES TO OPEN LETTER OF SENATOR NORRIS

PUBLISHER REVEALS HISTORY OF MEXICAN DOCUMENTS

They were first heard of in Mexico by a thoroughly reputable and reliable American citizen resident in Mexico, whose name has been given to the committee, but is not given here on account of possible consequences to him and his family at the hands of the Mexican government. This American citizen had no interest whatever in pursuing the documents except to earn facts which indicated an effort of the Mexican government to interfere with the plans and processes of the government of the United States and with the welfare of the people of the United States.

This American citizen, resident in Mexico, communicated with Mr. Edward H. Clark, a perfectly well-known business man of importance in New York, suggesting that a further knowledge of these papers be secured and their contents exposed to the knowledge of the American people through my publications.

WINS PRAISE

When authorized to proceed, this American, consulting with Mr. John Page, correspondent of the International News Service, decided to employ the most capable and trustworthy investigator that he could find in Mexico, and secured the services of an American citizen of Mexican descent, Mr. Avila, a man who had served honorably in the military secret service department of the United States, and after some years of service had been honorably discharged and had received the following most extraordinary letter of commendation from his superior:

Headquarters, Laredo District, District Intelligence Officer, Alexander Building, Laredo, Texas.

Sept. 27, 1919.

From Captain John J. Gallagher, U. S. A., District Intelligence Officer, Laredo, Texas.

To whom it may concern:

Subject—recommendation.

1. I take pleasure in being accorded the opportunity to offer a few words of commendation in behalf of Mr. Miguel R. Avila's splendid service rendered this office while I have been the district intelligence officer of Laredo district.

2. Mr. Avila is a young man of excellent character, and entirely subordinate at all times. He is conscientious and faithful in the performance of all duties. I unhesitatingly recommend him for any position of great responsibility where his many desirable qualifications are absolutely necessary and so essential in my duties of importance.

3. I take pleasure in offering this voluntary recommendation in behalf of Mr. Miguel R. Avila as I am about to be transferred elsewhere for duty.

John J. Gallagher,
Captain U. S. A.

Every care, therefore, was taken in this case to secure accuracy and reliability.

GOT PAPERS

Mr. Avila proceeded promptly to approach government clerks and to obtain a view of the documents in the files.

He reported back to the American citizen above mentioned and to Mr. John Page that the documents were there and that for the payment of a comparatively small sum of money he could obtain them.

He was authorized to obtain the documents, he did obtain them and delivered them to the above-mentioned American citizen and Mr. John Page.

Whereupon, they exhibited the documents immediately to Ambassador Sheffield and the conclusion arrived at was that the documents were authentic on their face and that there was nothing about them to contradict the report of Mr. Avila as to how and when he had obtained them.

The documents were then submitted to the counsel of the embassy, Mr. Shoenfeld, and he was of a similar opinion, but advised that careful comparisons should be made with known signatures of President Calles, which comparison was made and tended to convince all parties interested of the authenticity of the signatures.

The documents were then brought by Mr. John Page and the American citizen before mentioned to New York and submitted to Mr. Edward H. Clark, and by these three gentlemen submitted to me.

I asked and was told what effort had been made to establish the authenticity of the documents beyond reasonable question, and I suggested that the documents be submitted further to the President of the United States, then at his Summer residence in South Dakota.

COOLIDGE VIEWS

Mr. Clark took the documents to President Coolidge.

Mr. Clark found Ambassador Sheffield at the Coolidge home in South Dakota, and found the President sufficiently familiar with the details of the documents.

The President was unwilling to become further acquainted with the details, but said soundly that it should be remembered that the Senators mentioned undoubtedly never received the funds alluded to, and that the entries in the documents might possibly have been made with the object of camouflaging other disposition of those funds.

This suggestion was in harmony with the opinion that I had already expressed to the American citizen who obtained the documents and to Mr. John Page, and I determined not to print the names of the Senators mentioned in the documents, nor of any of the individuals implicated in the documents, but to leave the question of whether those names should be made public to any governmental body that might be interested in the documents.

The question may here properly be discussed as to whether this was the right course to pursue or whether any other course would have been a wiser course to pursue.

POSSIBILITIES

I might have, in the first place, refrained from publishing any of the documents, in which case, my possession of the documents being known, I would eventually have been accused by persons as careless of facts as Senator Norris, of having been too cowardly and too concerned for my property interests in Mexico to have revealed facts through the medium of my newspapers, which affected the welfare of the American people, and which the American people had a right to be acquainted with.

In the second place, I might have printed some of the documents and suppressed others, in which case I could have been accused of suppression of the facts or perversion of the facts to suit my own prejudices or opinions.

In the third place, I might have interviewed the Senators mentioned and published their explanations in my newspapers but I could not see and cannot now see, how denials made in my newspapers would have any superior force or effect over denials made by them under oath before a governmental body.

HELD FIVE MONTHS

Moreover, such a course would have necessitated the publication of the Senators' names, and I was in no way adequately informed of the probable course of the government, and as to whether it ever would be considered necessary or desirable by the government to make public the Senators' names.

Therefore, I mentioned no individuals, but merely printed the documents deleted of names, and left the determination of that important point for the government.

But I did print an editorial voicing my opinion and the opinion of President Coolidge, namely, that in all human probability no penny had ever reached the Senators mentioned and that these entries might have been made to camouflage the diversion or perversion of funds to other purposes.

I held these documents for five months, carefully considering what was the best course to pursue and what was the most considerate course to pursue.

CONFIRMATION

I finally decided upon the policy I adopted, and in reviewing the situation after the event I cannot see how I could have decided properly upon any other policy.

During the five months in which I held these documents, additional efforts were continually made to substantiate their authenticity.

The two clerks who delivered the original documents to Mr. Avila and to Mr. Page and the American business man above mentioned became apprehensive of their situation and left the country, carrying with them a general gathering of additional documents relating more or less definitely to the original documents and arrived at San Antonio, Tex.

These documents were also secured by Mr. Page and the American business man above mentioned, and they tended in their detail and in the variety of their reference further to confirm the authenticity of the original group of documents.

Finally, in New York City after the lapse of some four months some additional documents were discovered in the office of Mexican Consul-General Elias, half-brother of President Calles, which dovetailed with the two sets of documents already secured and tended in every elaboration further to confirm the authenticity of those documents.

And it was only when the authenticity of the documents became almost overwhelmingly established that publication began.

CANAL CONTROL

When publication began, I expected that the Congress of the United States then about to convene would take immediate notice of matters of such importance to the welfare of the people of the United States as the general distribution of Bolshevist propaganda by the Mexican government in the United States and as the outrageous action of the Mexican government in supporting with money and with arms, and with every possible influence, the revolution in Nicaragua, against the duly elected and constituted government of Nicaragua which government the United States was supporting in accordance with the treaties entered into between the United States and the Central American States, as President Coolidge has explained in his message.

I expected, too, that the Congress of the United States would take notice of the appropriation indicated in these documents of $100,000 authorized by President Calles, to be paid to the Brazilian arbitrator of claims, especially when the people of the United States and the government of the United States had been outraged by the unjust decision of that arbitrator, which deprived American citizens of hundreds of millions of dollars undoubtedly their due.

I thought, too, that the Congress of the United States would be interested in the intimate relations maintained between the Bolshevist government of Mexico and the Bolshevist government of Russia, and in the efforts of the Mexican government to support financially and morally social uprisings and revolutionary movements in other parts of the world, notably in China and in the general coal strike in England.

I thought, too that the Congress of the United States would be interested in the draft of a secret treaty between Mexico and Japan, under which Japanese were invited to colonize in Mexico and in Nicaragua, under the expressed provision that they would be available in time of war, and with the very probable intention—when combined with the support of the revolutionary movement in Nicaragua—of nullifying the interest of the United States in the Nicaraguan Canal, and eventually securing the control of that canal for Mexico and Japan.

CONFISCATION

But no interest was manifested by Congress in these vital matters which affected merely the public welfare and nothing in the way of activity in Congress occurred until the so-called senatorial letters were printed.

There remains to be discussed only the question of my motives.

It is true, as Mr. Norris said and as I told the committee, that I have property valued at approximately four million dollars in Mexico which I had possessed in peace and security through the friendship and favor of the Mexican Government.

Certainly nobody but a perfect jackass—and Senator Norris is not that—at least not a perfect one—could imagine that my property holdings were benefited by losing the friendship and favor of the Mexican government.

As a matter of fact, in publishing these documents there was strong probability in fact the near certainty — that these properties would be confiscated at the earliest possible moment by the Mexican government.

In fact, a Mexican subsidized newspaper the Excelsior already accuses me, according to the New York Herald-Tribune of Monday morning, of many plots and conspiracies, which is probably the preliminary to some trumped up procedure directed at the ultimate confiscation of these properties.

CAN STAND LOSS

However, I can stand the loss of these properties through the publication of the Mexican documents better than I could have stood the loss of my self-respect through the cowardly suppression of these documents out of consideration for my own interests rather than the interests of my fellow American citizens.

Finally, as to the alleged evil motive in endeavoring to reflect upon the insurgents in the Senate through the publication of these documents, that seems to me to be the most asinine statement that can be picked out of Senator Norris' scrap heap of misrepresentation and billingsgate.

My papers have always been in the main supporters of the insurgent group of Senators.

Senator Borah I have had occasion to support and commend probably more than any man in the Senate.

I do not know that I have ever supported Senator Norris but then I cannot recall that he has ever done anything worth supporting.

Young Senator La Follette declared in his statement before the committee that the Hearst papers were the strongest supporters that the Administration had.

IS INSURGENT

I would like to tell Senator La Follette that the truth is that the Hearst papers are the strongest supporters his father ever had and that when his father was being crucified during the war by false reports of his utterances in other newspapers, and when his expulsion from the Senate was even considered the Hearst papers day in and day out stood loyally by him and denounced the falsehoods which occasioned the attacks upon him, and declared that his utterances were patriotic in the light of his beliefs, and that in this free country no man should be unjustly attacked for expressing opinions based on conviction of what was for the best interest of his fellow countrymen.

As a matter of fact, I am an insurgent myself, and have always been and always will be an insurgent against whatever seems to be contrary to the interests of our government and the welfare of our people, and in sustaining those principles and that policy I published these Mexican documents, believing then and believing now that I did my simple duty, regardless of consequences to myself and considering merely the best benefit of the American people.

SENATOR NORRIS WRITES ON MEXICAN CHARGES

Washington, Dec. 20.—The reading of "An open letter to William Randolph Hearst" issued by Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, precipitated a debate in the Senate on the Mexican documents published in the Hearst newspapers. Senator Norris wrote:

"A fair analysis of the recent articles published in the Hearst papers showing an alleged attempt by Mexican officials to bribe United States senators and editors of various publications, and an analysis of your testimony before the Senate committee leads to the inevitable conclusion that you are not only unfair and dishonest, but that you are entirely without honor.

"These articles show, on their face, a constant attempt to draw conclusions not justified from the articles themselves and to practice deception upon the American people. It is not necessary to consider any other evidence in order to reach the fair conclusion that in them you are making an attempt not only to besmirch the character of some of our own officials and journalists, but that you are trying to excite an animosity and a hatred on the part of our people against the Mexican government, which, if your articles and alleged official documents were true, would inevitably lead to war between the two countries.

NAME OMITTED

"Your attempt to shield yourself from blame by not publishing the names of the four senators and the editors alleged to be implicated, when properly analyzed, only shows the maliciousness of your attack and adds to the dishonor of your motive. You published the alleged official documents with the names omitted, and at the same time, state that you stand ready and willing to deliver the original documents to any senate committee that may be appointed to make an investigation.

"You knew that the publication of these charges, with the names omitted, must inevitably lead to the appointment of an investigating committee, and that, therefore, the names which you have concealed are bound to be published and that, in fact the very withholding of the names adds to the curiosity and to the interest of an investigation.

"You knew therefore, to begin with, that the action you had taken would bring about the publication of the names and you cannot in ordinary honesty shield yourself or excuse yourself for the failure to give publicity to the names in the beginning. Moreover, if these allegations are true there is no reason why the identity of the individual senators should be suppressed.

NO INTIMATION

"If you wanted to be perfectly honest with these senators, why did you not state when the articles were published that you had no evidence that any of these senators were guilty and that you did not believe any of the charges against them? You gave no such intimation to the country until you were faced with the question on the witness stand.

"You have admitted before the committee that, in your judgment the senators were entirely innocent, why, then, did you permit your papers to publish such misleading and damaging headlines and why were you silent during all the time from December 9th until you appeared on the witness stand on December 15th?

"The real reason why you pursued this course was to save yourself from a libel suit, and the very fact that you took this course shows that you yourself, did not have confidence in the genuineness of the documents which you were publishing, because, if they were genuine you ran no risk in their publication. Your admission that in taking this course you had in mind the saving of yourself from damages in a libel suit is an admission that you believed, yourself, that these alleged official documents were forgeries.

OFFERED FOR SALE

You must have known what was common knowledge among all the newspapermen of the United States that many alleged official documents from Mexico were being offered for sale to all kinds of organizations and to all sorts of publications. There is not a newspaper man in the city of Washington but has not known for the past year that it was possible to buy forged documents relating to the Mexican government. Pedlars of this kind of merchandise were almost as common as bootleggers.

"To charge you with ignorance of this condition is to ascribe to you a stupidity that would be equaled only by your heartless malice in trying to wreck the good names of officials both in Mexico and in America, in order to carry out some scheme of your own.

AUTHENTICITY

"Your own newspapers, about two years ago, exposed the fact that our State Department had been offered and had accepted forged Mexican documents. You knew that if your alleged documents were genuine our Department of State would have made a thorough investigation and that they would not have been rejected by the President of the United States when they were submitted to him, as you say in your testimony they were.

"You knew that there was a question as to their authenticity and that if you had pursued the ordinary course that any honest man would take before he blackens the fair names of his fellow men, you would have reached the conclusion that they were absolutely false.

"And your excuse, given on the witness stand, that it would have given premature publicity to the transaction, is obviously false. You intended to give it publicity. You admitted on the stand that was the object you had in view. You say in these articles that that was the object which the Mexican officials had in view when these documents were turned over to you.

"The ordinary observer will not cease to take notice that the four senators mentioned were all prominent in the Senate in their opposition to interference by our Government in the affairs of Mexico. It is rather remarkable that it is only this class of senators whose reputations are attacked. These men were standing as forcefully as they knew how against a policy in Mexico which you were in favor of.

"It is likewise peculiar that Calles, the president of Mexico would spend his hard cash to bribe senators who were already advocating non-interference, a policy that he, himself, was anxious to carry out. We may disagree as to the kind of man Mr. Calles is, but even his enemies have never charged him with being either an ignoramus or idiot.

THE MOTIVE

"What is your motive, Mr. Hearst? You have testified before the committee that you have very valuable properties in Mexico. It is almost common knowledge that you were in favor of the overthrow of the present government. You evidently believed that if a revolution could be started it would mean financial benefit for your investments in Mexico.

"For the sake of making a few paltry dollars you are willing to blacken the character of honest journalists in your own profession. You were willing to cast suspicion upon the loyalty and the integrity of the members of the United States Senate. You were willing to charge that the president of a friendly republic is a traitor to his country. You were willing and apparently anxious to do something that would cause our government to intervene in Mexico.

"In other words for the sake of your financial investment you were not only willing to ruin the reputation of honest and innocent men, but you were willing to plunge our country into war with a friendly neighbor and thus increase the army of widows and orphans and wounded and crippled soldiers.

"The record which you have made in this matter is sufficient to place your publications in disrepute in the minds of all honest men and it demonstrates that the Hearst system of newspapers spreading like a venomous web to all parts of our country, constitutes the sewer system of American journalism."

TELEMOVIE TO GIVE FIRST BROADCAST

For the first time in the history of radio, station WPAP (394.5—760 kilocycles) will broadcast a complete description of the photoplay "Love" direct from the Embassy Theatre, New York, at 11.30 p.m. tonight, with Edward B. Husing announcing. The broadcasting will last one and one half hours with full orchestral accompaniment.

In the scene reproduced above from the photoplay John Gilbert appears as Count Vronsky and Greta Garbo as Anna. The picture is based on the world famous Tolstoi novel "Anna Karenina" and was directed by Edmund Goulding for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. New York has acclaimed it as one of the most fiery romances ever screened.

SALLY'S SHOULDERS

by Beatrice Burton
Author of "The HOLLYWOOD GIRL" etc.

The Story of a Clever Boston Girl and Her Temperamental Sister

CHAPTER XXXI

AT 8 o'clock on Wednesday morning the telephone rang loudly in the Jerome flat.

Sally dropped the knives she was cleaning and dashed to it, fearing lest its clamor should disturb her mother, who was still asleep.

"Hello," she said softly, her lips close to the black mouthpiece.

John Nye's voice answered her. "Hello, Miss Jerome. How's Millie, and what hospital is she in?" he asked, and there was anxiety in his tones.

Sally told him that Millie was much better and resting comfortably, according to all reports from the City Hospital.

"Now, then," he said, when she had finished. "Miss Kriss tells me that you offered to do some work for me while Millie's away from the office. Is that right?"

"Yes," breathed Sally, and was ashamed of the wild surge of joy that went through her heart.

"Well—when can you come?" His low, deep voice stirred her, even at this distance.

"Right away," replied Sally, knowing perfectly well that she still had some silver to clean, a lunch to get ready for her mother, and herself to dress.

"All right. Thanks very much," John Nye's voice spoke again in her ear. "I'll see you soon then."

She was still glowing with excitement when she hung up the receiver.

But as she finished her work and got into her street clothes she began to calm down. She began to be very much out of patience with herself because of that glow of excitement and happiness.

"Here you were yesterday, promising yourself that you'd never think of John Nye again because Millie's going to marry him," she told the Sally in the mirror above her dresser. "And look at yourself now!"

She was starry-eyed and deeply pink, and there was a smile that lifted the corners of her soft mouth and brought out the dimples in her cheeks. She had that miraculously happy look that a woman has when she is going to meet her lover, and at no other time. A very special kind of look it is.

But the girl who sat at the corner of John Nye's desk an hour later was an altogether different Sally. A quiet, business-like Sally, who kept her thick-lashed eyes on her dictation pad and never once raised them to meet his.

"Minutes of a special meeting of the board of directors of the Nye Development Company," his deep voice began, and Sally took the words down on paper with the speed and accuracy of a machine.

Mr. Peevey's fussy hurried dictation had long been a trial to her, but it had made an excellent stenographer of her.

"Going too fast for you?" John asked once, and without raising her head Sally answered him.

"No, Mr. Nye," she said, as meekly as ever she had said, "No, Mr. Peevey."

And so they kept it up till noon.

"I'm afraid I'll have to stop now," Sally said gravely, as the deep-noted bells of the cathedral rang out above the din and rush of the down town streets. "I've got to get Mr. Peevey's lunch ready for him."

'John Nye Was Here This Afternoon,' She Told Sally

Nye looked up at her and grinned. "We covered a lot of ground this morning, didn't we?" he asked pleasantly. "I like the way you work."

Without a word Sally left him.

That night when she stopped in at the City Hospital to see Millie she was taken, not to the ward, but to a big, bright, private room.

It was filled with flowers—with late roses and early chrysanthemums. Amid their bloom and color and fragrance Millie lay, white as a ghost and without a trace of the made-up beauty that was hers.

"John Nye was here this afternoon," she told Sally with lips that barely moved. "He brought all these flowers, and had me moved into this room and got a special nurse for me. I wouldn't see him, looking the way I do. Bring me my bottle of Chinese black and my lip-stick next time you come, will you?"

And after Sally had promised she would, she took no further interest in her, but turned her white face to the shadowy wall and went to sleep—or pretended to go to sleep.

With a heavy heart, Sally went home. . . . It seemed so like charity to take the private room and the services of the special nurse from John Nye, somehow. She wished that he hadn't gone to the hospital and moved Millie out of the ward where she was.

All the rest of the week Sally worked from 9 to 12 for John Nye. Trig and fresh in her crisp, white blouses, she would sit across the room from him, tapping away on her typewriter, her head bent to show the lovely curve of her head her lowered lashes making a violet shadow on her cheeks.

Every now and then she would look stealthily up at John Nye—at his fine, dark head, his jutting, arrogant nose, and the straightness of his broad back as he sat at his desk.

"How under the sun can Millie even look at a man like Davidson when she can have a man like this?" She put the question to herself a hundred times during that first week.

She wondered, too, how Millie could cold-bloodedly plan to marry John Nye for his money when he, himself, was so attractive. So much of a man.

"Why, any girl should be glad and proud to marry him if he didn't have one cent to rub up against another," she told herself.

Every day John Nye called at the hospital, and every night when Sally went there there were fresh flowers in the tall glass vases, and baskets of dainties that the special nurse ate and passed around to the other nurses.

For Millie would eat nothing. She drank a little milk three times a day and refused all other food. She said she wasn't hungry and the doctor began to worry about her.

"She's not getting along as well as I'd hoped," he told Sally one night when he happened to come in while she was there. "She won't eat."

"I don't want to eat," Millie told him crossly. She didn't want to be propped up in bed, either, and she had refused steadfastly to see anybody but her mother and Sally. To them she talked very little. "I'm tired," was all she would say. "I want to be let alone."

He Cleared His Throat and Laid a Second Check Before Her

Sally worried not only about her but about the money that John Nye was paying out for the room and the special nurse and all the rest of it.

On Saturday noon John Nye came over and stood beside her desk. She could see him out of the corner of her eye, but she did not look up until he spoke to her. She had a piece of paper before her and she was making a list of her expenses for the week on it—so much for groceries, so much for milk, so much for lunches and so much left over for the rent. She was always trying to get together the money for the rent, it seemed to her.

She laid her hand over the paper now and turned to look up at John.

Something in his face told her that he had seen the pathetic little list.

"Here's Millie's check. Perhaps she'd like to have it," he said gravely. "I'd take it to her myself, but she doesn't seem to want to see me."

Then he cleared his throat and laid a second check before her on the desk.

"You've been so good to me—I thought perhaps you'd let me give you this one," he went on, and looking down at it Sally saw that it was made out for $25.

"But I've just done Millie's work and that's paid for," she was beginning, when he stopped her.

"No, no. You've done more work than Millie ever did for me," he said in his nice, quick way, "and yesterday when I was tied up with those men from out of town you brought me that lunch."

"Anyone would have done that," replied Sally, a flush rising to her cheeks and her eyes darkening. "I saw that you weren't going to have time to go out before they came. . . . I won't keep this check."

She stood up and held it out to him.

"You've done so much for us now that I'm ashamed whenever I think of it," she said softly, huskily. "Paying for Millie's room and getting a nurse for her when you knew we couldn't afford one—and—all those flowers—and now this!"

She looked at the check again, and suddenly, surprisingly, she began to cry!

He stooped and put his arms around her exactly as he might have put his arms around a hurt child, comforting her. He stroked her hair.

In his arms she was very sweet and cool and fresh. She had none of the perfume, none of the cuddling, nestling softness of Millie. She was like an armful of apple-blossoms picked early in the morning with the dew on them.

And then she pulled herself away from him and, still crying, ran out of the office.

On the floor at his feet lay the check he had given her. It was in two pieces. She had torn it up!

He stood looking at the two bits of pale-blue paper for a full minute. Then he stooped, picked them up and put them both in his bill-fold.

All day the feeling of Sally in his arms stayed with him.

John puffed away at his pipe and idly wondered how soon Millie would be out of the hospital and why she wouldn't see him when he called there. He missed Millie.

Tomorrow—Millie wants to see Davidson who amused her before she met John.

Triangles -:- There's Only One Kind That's Really Happy -:-

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack

FROM the beginning of time the triangle has ever been accepted as the sign of mystery. Of course, there are mysteries and mysteries! Why there's hardly a day passes that the newspapers don't carry flaring headlines of "another Love Triangle" or perhaps it may be a gruesome, sordid triangle that ends in tragedy.

These are the triangles that cause Don Cupid to weep bitter tears of disappointment. Times change swiftly. Dr. Mary Walker, who used to call on Charles A. In the next issue Mr. Whitehead will explain the salient points in the bidding and play of the above hand. Fill out your own chart and compare it with his method.

These hands must be bid or played "Double Dummy," i. e., as though all four hands were exposed.

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 4. Declarer must use his last two trumps to draw the two remaining in South's hand. This he cannot afford to do as Dummy is blocking the Club suit as he would then have no re-entry to make his remaining Clubs, and taking three tricks in that suit Dummy. He must therefore take two rounds of Clubs and then trump by the discard of Dummy's Club on his own last trump. South trumps the second round of Clubs. Declarer's plan will fail but he must risk that chance, the only way to make game on hand.

Trick 8. Declarer leads his last trump and discards Dummy's blocking King of Clubs.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write him care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

The Club Members Go in Hiding

Dear Skippy:

I got to readin' your letter to the Orioles. They was all very interested about the little girl that got her arm burned. Somerset Gohagen says, "What kinda fire was it?" "Burnt, ain't she?" I says. "Didn't Skippy see it with his own eyes? Besides it oughta learn you not to be pickin' up cigar stubs."

Then I gotta readin' about where ya wanted all that skin, an' all the Orioles resigned from me an' I am the only one in the Club now. I tried to round up the guys, but they're all stayin' in their rooms, an' Somerset Gohagen has been hidin' in the coal bin all day. I think it's goin' to be very hard to get the skin, an' even if I do get some skin how do I send it up? Should I put stamps on it, or should I put it in a box? I'm willin' to give my skin but I spose I'll have to give up skating if I do. You don't say anything about whether you're goin' to give any skin or not, an' of course I ain't to be took in unless I know somebody is goin' to be with me.

In your last letter ya said there was another bed in your room. Maybe I could come up, but first of all I want to know how is the eats. Do ya get any ice cream? It don't look like a very hot life to me, sittin' around blowin' soap bubbles outta spools all day! I wish you'd get out o' that place. Course I'll stick by you, but ya mustn't forget that Christmas is comin' on an' I have a habit o' hangin' me own stockin' at home.

The guys feel that you're missin' the idea of an Athletic Club, 'cause when they started they said they was out for baseball. They ain't very strong about plasterin' up the hospitals with skin, an' besides, Somerset Gohagen said, if they don't use all the skin how are we goin' to put it back on. He says it looks like a lot o' cuttin' an' stitchin' to him. Danny Shea says he thinks he can get a piece of skin for you if you want it, 'cause his old man's got the flag tattooed on his chest, an' since the Judges gave all that alimony to the old woman he wished it was an anchor instead. Let me know if ya want Danny Shea's ole man's tattoo.

Write as soon as ya get this.

DELINQUENT YOUTH

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS.

UNTIL two years ago Robin was an ordinary, everyday boy. He was neither very good nor very brilliant nor very industrious. But he had never been especially dishonest nor troublesome.

Then one day he fell off a fast-moving truck and hit his head on the paved street. He lay in the hospital for two weeks and suffered agony with his head. But he gradually recovered and went back to work.

Three months after the accident he gave a merchant a check on a bank where Robin had no account at all. The merchant found it out and called the boy's father into conference. The father paid the amount and lectured the boy on the danger of such proceedings.

Because Robin's father stood well in the community and business men felt kindly toward him they were lenient towards the son. So when the boy committed another offense his father was called again. He paid the deficit and told Robin that the next time he broke the law he would go to jail. But Robin formed another check. This time his mother saved him from the punishment his father thought he should have.

Before the year was out the boy had forged another check. He had also performed various other senseless and dishonest acts.

Robin's father was a working man and there were younger children to feed, clothe and educate.

"I simply can't go on paying to get that boy out of trouble," he declared. "I'm going to let the law take its course. Maybe it will teach him a lesson."

The boy's mother knew that association with jail-birds would do her son no good. She was sick with grief and shame. Finally, the worry prostrated her completely. Then the family physician was called in and she told him what had happened.

"There is something the matter with Robin's brain," said the doctor. "His performances prove that. It is probably the result of his accident. I'm going to have him examined."

So the good doctor took the boy to a clinic and secured the services of a brain specialist. They made a thorough examination and discovered that there was a slight pressure upon the boy's brain, which necessitated an operation. It was a delicate and dangerous operation—but his parents said:

"We'd rather see him dead than behind bars. We'll take the risk."

Robin stood the operation and recovered. He is now in a vocational school, where he is being taught a definite trade by which he can earn a good living.

Men of science and welfare leaders who deal with delinquent youth have known for years that wrong-doing is often the result of mental defects. At last people of ordinary walks of life are realizing the truth.

It isn't jail no beating nor ostracism that ering youth needs. It is frequently medical care. Sometimes it is food and clothes and shelter. Sometimes it is a kindly hand to help them out of a desperate situation. And they always need discipline and training.

A Wife's Meditations

By HELEN ROWLAND.

HANG upon the chandelier, inviting osculation—

But, like Othello, I, alas, have lost my occupation!

They're petting on the sofa; they are cuddling in th' chairs—

They're spooning in the motor cars, and courting on the stairs.

Once, lovers wailed eagerly to kiss beneath the bough—

But now they kiss most anywhere, and every where—and HOW!

* * *

When a man goes in for matrimony these days, he should know either one of two things: how to make a woman happy or how to dodge a bullet.

Marrying a man may be putting the skid-chains on his affections; but even then, you'll have to keep your toe on the clutch, your eye on the lookout and your hand on the emergency brake.

* * *

A man never pays attention to a woman until she stops talking!

* * *

A real lover cannot be lost—he can only be temporarily mislaid. Nothing except death or jail will keep a man away from a woman he honestly loves.

* * *

Nowadays, a man's idea of love-making appears to be to "go into the silence," assume an expectant attitude and wait patiently for the girl to tell him that he loves her.

* * *

Most of a man's clothes appear to be merely stop-gaps or after-thoughts onto which to hitch other garments.

* * *

Marrying for money or for anything on earth except for love, is letting yourself in for the cold gray dawn of life's "morning after," without having had the rose-colored romance of the "night before."

* * *

Life loses its last grain of charm for a man only when he loses his last spark of curiosity about women.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY.

IT'S less than one week now, until Christmas, and Santa Claus is getting ready to start out on his annual detour.

THOUSANDS of people are going to do away with stockings this year and hang up flasks.

EVERY mantelpiece will look like a bar.

IF they can't have a white Christmas, they want a wet one.

DECEMBER 25th will come in pints and quarts.

SAY it with Scotch and let your beneficiaries send the flowers.

SANTA is bringing something for everybody. He has over 10,000 sawed-off shot guns for Chicago kiddies.

INSTEAD of rattles, he's giving them black-jacks.

"SOCK me to sleep" is the Illinois lullaby.

IT'S written for the piano, but it's played on skulls.

SANTA will run into a lot of new traffic regulations this year. Most chimneys are now one way, going up.

SEVERAL New York Scotchmen have put toll gates on their roofs.

THEY want ten per cent. of everything he gives away.

THERE are some towns that he won't be able to visit at all. They don't allow any deliveries on Sunday.

EVEN the chimneys are closed on the Sabbath.

HELL have a tough time out West. He can't make any left hand turns in California.

HELL have to park in Oregon and telephone his presents to Los Angeles.

THIS year, Santa has discarded his reindeer and is using a couple of stallions, which enables him to become one of the Four Horsemen and take his place alongside of Paul Revere, Helen of Troy and the Prince of Wales.

BEAUTIFUL FRIENDSHIP FOR FRISBY PROMISED

It's just this sort of thing Frisby is trying to stop in the halls of Congress.

BY MR. FRISBY
Congressman-at-Large

WASHINGTON—Today I was pained to discover that some of our Congressmen, although professing to be prohibitionists, are indeed violators of the Volstead Act.

By stealth I gathered my data, thus:

Seeing a Page Boy, running up and down the aisles I snapped my fingers and beckoned the lad to come thither.

"Well, little man," said I "where are you going?" I asked.

"I've got some ginger ale," he replied.

"Ginger Ale!" exclaimed I. "Yes," he replied, "and cracked ice!"

"And who, may I ask for?" I continued.

"Congressman Gluts," said the boy.

"Where is he?"

"In the cloak room."

I tiptoed to the cloak room and had a long talk with Congressman Gluts. He said he had a cold—in fact, we both have been bothered by lumbago. Congressman Gluts loves to tell stories. He also invited me to meet his secretary, which I certainly shall do.

I believe it was the start of a beautiful friendship, as Congressman Gluts and I have promised to work hand in hand.

Management of the Roosevelt Hotel, Pittsburgh, has posted the following notice for guests—

One of the many troubles of the hotel owner is keeping the bedroom furniture repaired and polished where playful guests have opened various bottles in these prohibition days by knocking the tops on the sharp edges of the dressers and tables and have set them dripping on the flat surfaces so that tell-tale stains of white remain. At the Roosevelt we have tried to anticipate the wants of our guests who vote so strongly for prohibition and cling to their Pop and Sodas by providing patent bottle-openers and corkscrews fastened to the wall and glass tops for the dressers.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Emb. Mom. Aquarium,
Emb. Mom. Tank,
Sir—

Recently I was invited to a party given by the boys and girls of Hollywood. Upon arriving I found everybody sitting around the rooms with hands folded in their laps and staring at one another. Thinking to be the life of the party, I pulled a bottle of gin from my pocket and cried: "Come and get it." Imagine my embarrassment when three women and two men were trampled beyond recognition.

THREE IDENTIFY LOS ANGELES SLAYER

the trail, as word came that the report was wrong and that the kidnaper-slayer who had signed himself as "The Fox" was still at large.

Meantime, it was announced, three persons had identified Hickman as the young man wanted for the actual slaying, prompted by a desire for revenge rather than ransom money say the police.

The identifications were credited to Perry M. Parker, father of the murdered 12-year-old school girl; Miss Neona Britten, teacher at Marian's school, and Jack Wood, a garage attendant.

IDENTIFIED BY PHOTOS.

They all recognized him through photos shown them by the police, who also have fingerprints of Hickman obtained when he was arrested here on forgery charges.

Wood reported that early today the young man he later identified as Hickman drove into the garage in a blue Cadillac with wire wheels and ordered five gallons of gasoline.

When he got it he requested a new bulb for one of his headlights. While the attendant was inside the building getting the light, the big blue car pulled out at top speed.

Jack Woods, the attendant, jumped into his automobile and gave chase, not for a fugitive with $100,000 on his head, but to collect $1.03 for the gasoline.

At top sped the two cars thundered down Sixth street to Broadway, the main business artery of the city.

ESCAPES IN DARKNESS.

They swung into Broadway going north, with the fugitive gaining. Someone telpehoned police about the mad chase, which was headed almost directly for the headquarters of Herman H. Cline, chief of detectives, in charge of the man hunt.

It was Cline who had announced that the man sought for the killing was Hickman, once employed in the bank where the girl's father, Perry M Parker, was an official.

The detective chief threw a squad of ten officers into the street at a moment's notice. Before they could reach that intersection the fugitive, without slowing down, spun east and escaped in the darkness.

Meanwhile a heavy guard was thrown around central police station, where a man whose name was not divulged, but who is said by Cline to have been an intermediary between the abductor and the Parker family, is being held. This man, an aviation enthusiast, came here recently from Kansas City, former home of Hickman.

Detectives pointed to the slayers use of the aviation term "solo" in the ransom notes as a bit of proof that the arrested man might have acted at least in an advisory capacity in the penning of the death missives.

ARRESTED AS FORGER.

Hickman in January last was given a job in the bank. He worked as a messenger until six months ago when arrested for forgery.

Admitting having traced signatures from checks in his care, the youth confessed and was paroled to his mother. Police believe Hickman got the erroneous impression that Parker had opposed the parole and urged a prison sentence.

Last week came the sequel as construed by Chief Cline. Marian was taken from school on a pretext that her father had been injured and was calling for her. Parker got a telegram revealing she was in the hands of a kidnaper who demanded $1,500 ransom in $20 bills.

He appealed to the police, who kept watch where the distracted father was to meet the kidnaper. The latter did not appear.

Then came notes to Parker scoring him for notifying the police and enclosing two plaintive appeals from little Marian for rescue, warning her father not tell the police. The latter were then called off.

Parker drove alone to an appointed place near his home, Saturday night. Another auto approached. A masked man with a pistol leaned out and asked about the money.

Parker asked to see the child. The stranger pointed to the rear seat saying, "She's asleep," demanded the money and said he would leave the child a short distance ahead. He drove off with the "ransom" and hurled the wrapped form of Marian out of the car. Then Parker drove up and found the child had been killed and cut to pieces.

FINGERPRINT CLUES.

Finger marks on an auto steering wheel led to the identification of Hickman. Sergeant H. L. Barlow, police fingerprint expert, was given the steering wheel, taken from a Chrysler coupe identified as the car driven by the abductor. He obtained prints of the finger marks on the wheel and some on the rear window of the car, then matched them with those of Hickman when he was arrested last Summer for forgery.

Barlow next learned that Hickman came from Kansas City and that the stolen car came from the same place.

Kansas City police, called by phone, revealed that Dr. Herbert L. Mantz, robbed of his car at the muzzle of a gun, lived only a few blocks from where the Hickman family dwelt.

Then came photographs of the young man, taken when he was held for forgery. They were rushed to the school teachers who had talked with Marian Parker's abductor and they identified him.

Hickman spent much of his time while in jail here experimenting with poisons.

Charles Dowling, a jail trusty, shared a cell with him. Today Dowling said Hickman obtained all the chemicals he could and mixed them he said, to perfect a poison that would not show up in chemical analysis.

Dowling said Hickman told him of having surgical instruments at home and of his interest in dissection.

"All a Terrible Mistake," Says Mo'her of Hickman

Kansas City, Dec. 20 (A.P.)—Dazed by the news that her son, William Edward Hickman, had been identified as the kidnaper and slayer of little Marian Parker in Los Angeles, Mrs. Eva Hickman today declared: "It's all a terrible mistake."

"I won't believe it until I hear an admission from Edward's own lips," she said, tearfully.

"He's in Chicago. The police could find him there."

Mrs. Hickman said the last she had heard from her son was a letter he sent from Chicago last October.

The white-haired mother could not comprehend such a crime by her son.

"I know my boy could not be guilty of such an unspeakable thing.

"This was the act of a fiend. My boy is a good, clean boy. He could not have done it. There is a mistake somewhere."

Mrs. Hickman lives with a daughter, Mary Hickman, 17. They have two rooms. Formerly the Hickmans owned their home here, but gave that up after one son married, and three others moved away. Mrs. Hickman has not lived with her husband for seven years and they are divorced.

Identified Slayer as Described by Police

Los Angeles, Dec. 20 (A.P.)—Following is the police description of William Edward Hickman, wanted for murder of Marian Parker:

An American, 25 to 30 years old; height, 5 feet 7 or 8 inches; weight, 150 pounds; slender build. Smooth shaven, complexion very fair, grey piercing eyes, dark brown hair parted right and left, slightly wavy. Neatly dressed; hands well kept. Gives impression of being a business man or employed in a bank. Last seen carrying pearl grey fedora and wearing brownish-grey overcoat, which appeared to be herringbone cloth.

While police estimated Hickman's age at more than 25, his mother insisted he was 19.

FRANKLIN GARDENS PLEA TURNED DOWN

The Board of Street Commissioners today voted leave to withdraw on the petition to have Franklin Gardens, at Humboldt avenue and Crawford street, Roxbury, declared a public way under a new name.

Franklin Gardens is the site of a $250,000 apartment house which was erected hanging over the street, and the builders were charged with violating the zoning act. While the matter was still before the street commissioners a petition was filed with the Supreme Court by F. H. Stevens. The Supreme Court intimated the problem could be solved by the street commissioners making it a public way.

"Whittling Cal" Gets a Deluge of Knives and Calls Halt

Washington, Dec. 20 (A.P.)—President Coolidge doubts whether he really will have much time for "whittling," after all, when he leaves the White House.

Publication of a story that he had remarked he would whittle for a while has brought to the White House a plenteous supply of jack knives, presented by friends and admirers.

Today Mr. Coolidge let it be known that he does not need any more, and dobuts whether he will find opportunity after his retirement to use even those he has.

FAST RESPONSE PRAISED BY ADMIRAL

"You can't beat the weather and the sea," said Rear Admiral Philip Andrews Boston Navy Yard commandant today in answering criticism of the delay in S4 rescue work.

"I have never known such a quick response to any naval disaster," he said. "It is always easy to criticize and it is easy to say what might have been done.

"In this case weather conditions are hampering and making impossible a continuance of the work that started off so well. An man that ever went to sea realizes that you can't beat the weather."

Regarding the use of the mine layer Falcon to bring to Boston the injured diver, Michaels, the commandant declared that this was the only boat on which the diver could have been carried without killing him.

"Admiral Brumby told me," said Rear Admiral Andrews, "that he knew it was impossible and would be impossible for the Falcon to do any more work at that time and for hours.

"He said that if he attempted to move the diver to another ship it would almost certainly have resulted fatally, because the man was almost dead from exposure.

"The Falcon was the only ship fitted with decompressing tanks to take care of him."

Disaster Inquiry Board Will Convene in Hub

Washington, Dec. 20.—The court of inquiry which will investigate the cause of the S4 disaster will probably sit in Boston after the New Year. This announcement came from Admiral H. A. Wylie, commander of the United States fleet, who was appointed by Secretary Wilbur to institute the inquiry.

Two rear admirals and a captain with submarine experience will constitute the board, he said.

All possible to rescue the living members of the crew of the S4 was being done according to a statement from Chairman Hale of the Senate committee following a Washington conference with Admiral Charles F Hughes, chief of naval operations.

Washington, Dec. 20 (A.P.)—Investigation by a House Committee of the sinking of Navy submarines, S4 and S51 was asked today by Representative Griffin, Democrat, New York.

Hope of Saving S4 Men Abandoned by the Navy

Washington, Dec. 20 (I.N.S.)—The navy has given up hope of rescuing alive members of the crew of the submarine S4.

"Everything is against them."

This utterance from an admiral today summarized the official attitude after a conference at which reports of the heroic fight against overwhelming odds had been considered by all the navy's highest officers.

DIVERS' TELEPHONE MAN SENT TO PROVINCETOWN

He will report immediately to Rear Admiral Brumby, in charge of operations, aboard the mine sweeper Falcon.

SNIZEK OF S4 HOME LAST ON HONEYMOON

Ridgefield, N. J., Dec. 20 (A.P.)—Frank Snizek, one of the six men entombed alive in the sunken submarine S4, was serving his third enlistment in the navy, though he was only 25 years old. He first enlisted nine years ago when he was 16. His widowed mother, Mrs. Katherine Snizek, signed the papers that enabled him to enlist at that age. Last Summer he married Miss Eleanor Adams of Bridgeport, Ct. The last time he was at home was on his honeymoon.

SPORTS AT SUBMARINE BASE ARE CANCELLED

New London, Ct., 20 (A.P.)—Out of respect for the dead of the S4, and in sympathy with the six members of her crew believed now to be making their last valiant battle to keep alive in the deadly air of the wrecked craft, a dance and basketball game, scheduled for tonight at the submarine base, has been cancelled. Order for the cancellation was issued by Commander E. F. Cutts.

SAYS MAGRUDER LACKS FACTS

Washington, Dec. 20 (A.P.)—Rear Admiral Thomas P. Magruder, deposed commander of the Philadelphia Navy Yard, was accused today by Representative Britten of Illinois of being unable to substantiate with specific figures his charges of waste in naval administration.

Representative Britten, who is acting chairman of the House naval committee, told the admiral that "when we ask for concrete facts, I find you have nothing at all."

Magruder said he thought Britton's statement was unfair and offered to get the specific data.

"The committee can get that, too," replied Britten, who added:

"We would rather get it from you, as you have been in the limelight as a great naval expert."

"I take exception to that," retorted Magruder.

Dear Editor:—

For courteous, efficient and moderately priced service, D. W. Dunn Company certainly are accorded my preference above all others engaged in moving services.

They exercise surprising care in handling furniture. Their workmen have always proven most considerate of the customers' wishes. These factors are supplemented by the fact that although the service is of highest degree and the vans are the best obtainable, the rates are so reasonable that they are beyond comparison.

When we move Dunn moves us. That's what mother says and she knows the best. He has proven the excellency of his service each time he moved us in the past.

Certainly these facts cause me but reason to give my hearty approval of Dunn Company and their methods and dealings, which always are very fair.

Gentlemen:—

Just a line in favor of the very fine treatment we received at the establishment of a very reliable automobile salesroom. After having looked at cars offered by several dealers a fellow who works with my husband introduced us at the Scott Motors, formerly A. W. Woodruff, Inc., at 1027 Commonwealth Ave., and we secured just the model we had been looking for.

The price was so low that it surprised us and the machine looks like a brand new one.

Very truly,
Mrs. John F. Burke,
30 Newcastle Rd., Brighton

Dear Sir:—

McPherson's at 71-79 Hanover St., is the place where they solve your problems.

It was always a problem to buy a man's present until I saw their ad in your paper. I went into their store and there I found just what I knew a man would like, a wonderful pair of gloves.

I will always know where to go when I want to solve problems like these.

Riley's Free Library

Founded on Thoughtfulness

Speaking in Boston recently Dr. Lewis Perry, since 1914 principal of New Hampshire's famous college preparatory school, told how the loan library at Phillips Exeter Academy got its start.

"At the end of a Spring term, long ago," Dr. Perry said, "'Mike' Riley, the school carpenter, found some books that had been left by graduating students.

"'Mike' assembled the books in one room and told the poorer boys to borrow them. Thus was the loan library started spontaneously. It now contains 3,500 books and is a great help to boys who cannot afford to buy."

It may surprise some who have heard of Exeter as the outstanding school preparatory to Harvard to learn that there ARE poor boys among its 600 students. Exeter was Daniel Webster's school, and Edward Everett's and Lewis Cass'. No other school has given so MANY distinguished men to the Nation.

But Exeter has its share of ambitious boys from homes which are strangers to wealth and more than fifty scholarships are open to those who can qualify. For lads like these the "Michael Riley Library" is a blessing.

We should be glad to know more about Mr. Riley, the carpenter. Did "Plupy" know him? Is there any mention of him in "The Real Diary"? He must have been a merry heart, a man who thought NO duty small.

Very, Very Old?

Or Young? Hard to Guess

HOW OLD IS HE?

Looking at this elephant head, how old would you guess the animal to be? The eye looks aged, tired and full of wisdom. The wrinkles are deep. The age is hard to guess.

If the art department had not carefully blotted out the figure of a man beside the elephant, and much taller than the elephant, you would see at once that this is a young, very small baby elephant, with no experience of the world.

And yet, the appearance of age in its face, like the appearance of great wisdom in a human baby with a high forehead, is REAL.

The baby elephant looks old because it inherits its parents' millions of years of experience on the earth. Elephants are, excepting the higher apes, the most intelligent animals. They think, are cautious, the brain that they have is small in proportion to a man's brain, weight for weight, but is big compared with the brains of many other animals.

That brain has been working for them through many thousands of centuries.

The baby elephant inherits the appearance of wisdom and of age because the parents have been THINKING animals.

This may interest human mothers, who see in their babies' bumpy, high foreheads an amount of wisdom and thought that seem marvelous in a child.

The dormant wisdom is there, born of past ages of thinking. You see it in the baby face.

Look at the face or the forehead of a savage baby and you do not see the appearance of age and philosophical solemnity that you see in a civilized baby's face.

In the same way, in the head of a baby chick or mouse you see none of the aged wisdom of the baby elephant.

We must learn for ourselves a great deal. Fortunately our ancestors learned a great deal FOR US.

Any child can be taught reading and writing, almost in babyhood. In early childhood, algebra, Latin.

All the patient kindness in the world would not teach the most intelligent animal the things that the dullest child learns with comparative ease.

That is because our children have back of them at least 500,000, and probably 1,000,000, years of thinking, talking, brain development.

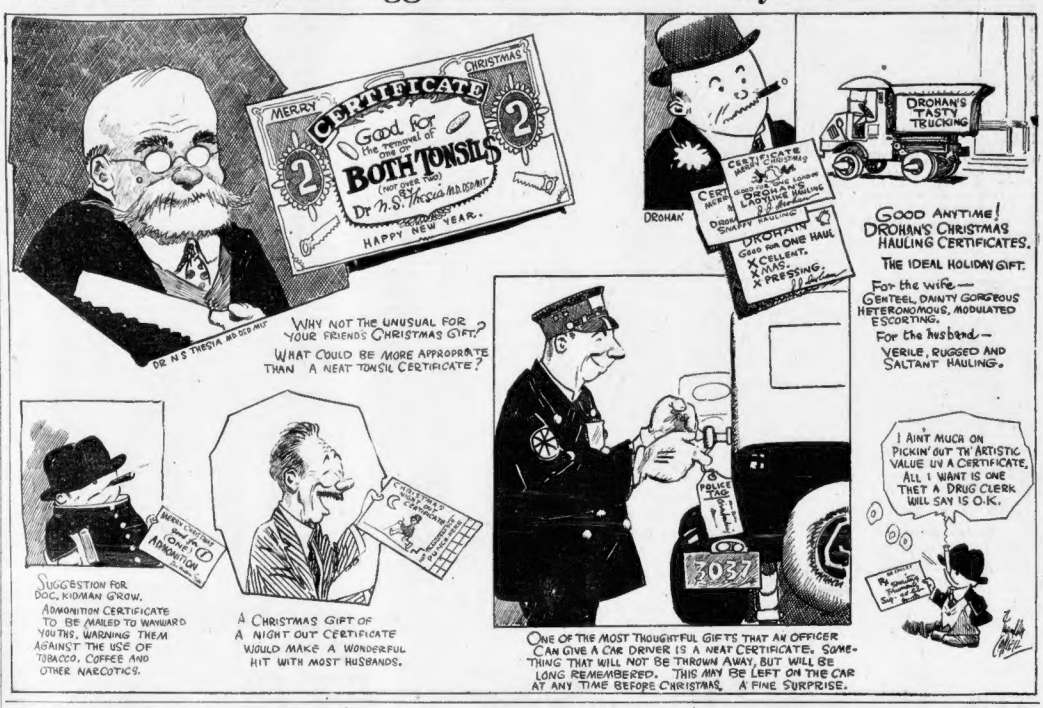

Man, the weakest animal, without big teeth, powerful claws, or great speed, lived always in danger of his life. And had to THINK from the first.

What tusks and great weight were to the elephant, teeth to the lion, or the rhinoceros' horn to him, man's THINKING MACHINERY was to man.

Our babies look old and wise because they inherit age and wisdom.

This little elephant similarly looks old and very wise for an animal, because he descends from what may be called the nearest approach to a thinking animal. The brain of an elephant is above that of every other animal except that of the highest apes, the chimpanzee, gorilla and orang-outang.

Christmas Certificate Suggestions -:- By Franklin Collier

WHAT WE DON'T KNOW WOULD FILL BOOK

By DR. FRANK CRANE

We know a lot of things, we have made tremendous discoveries, especially during the nineteenth century, and have pushed our scope of information out very far.

But we still stand, as it were, upon the banks of an illimitable sea and look out over the vast expanse of waters.

What we do not know would fill a very large book.

For instance, what is gravitation?

There is a certain force in every particle of matter that attracts in a certain ratio every other particle of matter. It holds the earth and the moon in their orbits, controls the stars and keeps us all sitting firmly in our chairs.

We know how to use it and we make scales with which to measure it. But what is it?

Who has ever sought to catch the isolated germ of gravitation?

And then there is electricity.

Does Mr. Edison or anybody else know what electricity is?

I never knew of but one man that did know and he was a motorcar conductor. He said it was the "juice."

We can control it and we can put wires to conduct it and we can turn it on or off, but what is it? Who has ever isolated that germ?

And what is infantile paralysis? Here is a plague that is slaughtering hundreds of thousands every year in the United States and before its insidious attacks the doctors throw up their hands.

Or what is cancer?

Does anybody know what causes cancer? We can say that it comes under certain conditions, and maybe it does, sometimes, but what is it and how shall we treat it?

What is life?

Scientists the other day claimed that they were soon to manufacture human beings out of chemicals. Maybe we are, but it hasn't been done yet.

All this talk about making life is talking through your whiskers. Nobody yet has made a living thing from something that is not already alive.

Where life comes from and where life goes to are still inscrutable mysteries.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Thus times do shift; each thing his turn does hold;
New things succeed as former things grow old.—Herrick.

For always roaming with a hungry heart,
Much have I seen and known.

Wit is the salt of conversation, not the food.—Hazlitt.

Nothing dries sooner than a tear.
—Cicero.

We become wiser by adversity; prosperity destroys our appreciation of the right.—Seneca.

Boston DAY by DAY

THE high school youth of Weymouth and Boston have lost an inspiring teacher and friend in the resignation of Edwin R. Sampson from the faculty of Mechanic Arts High School. Mr. Sampson was a headmaster for thirty years in Weymouth and Boston schools. Now all his attention will be taken up as treasurer of the North Weymouth Co-Operative Bank and as Selectman of the town.

Almost two years ago most of the engineers employed by the City of Boston organized to help better the city service. At that time Alfred E. Haskins of Brighton was elected president. Haskins was re-elected last January and now he has been made president of the Neighborhood Club of Waltham. Just at this time Mr. Haskins is on a vacation and says he won't be elected to anything more, at least until his return.

Several of Boston's well known ministers get out small church magazines for their congregations. About ten of the editors have a monthly get-together lunch in an informal fraternity. Dr. L. O. Hartman recently nominated Dr. John Van Schaick to the presidency of the group.

Just a few nights ago the monthly meeting was in full swing when the Rev. Dr. Van Schaick rose and delivered a beribboned baton about three feet long to Dr. Hartman with a speech of gratitude. The baton, a new symbol of power, made Dr. Hartman once more the president of the group.

And the "Doctor" for Hartman means Doctor of Divinity as well as Doctor of Philosophy. Two degrees separately earned and both the highest distinctions a student can have.

Dean Roscoe Pound of the Harvard Law School has one of the most retentive minds in the world. Frequently when he is talking before a group he will quote yards and yards of all sorts of figures, statistics, reports and investigations. Cases and authorities are on the tip of his tongue. The Dean probably has America's best memory. This, coupled with his extraordinary ability, is the reason he is the remarkable leader he is.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

DON'T generalize!

Don't try to run people into fixed molds.

Don't say, "Men are like this," or, "Women are like that," and then judge them according to your rigid theories. There is no definite pattern for a man. Nor for a woman.

Some men are sensitive, sentimental, timid, impractical. They shrink from the ugly, dangerous things of life. They crave peace and beauty and harmony. They have noble dreams, but they are often unable to put their own lives in order.

Do not sneer at men like that. Do not brand them as sissies or weaklings. They are what they are and they did not select the plan on which they were fashioned any more than they selected the shape of their noses or the color of their hair. As a matter of fact, their pattern is as masculine as any other. What is the pattern of a masculine soul? There is no such thing! BODIES POSSESS SEX—BUT SOULS ARE "WHAT HAVE YOU?"

You can't generalize about women, either. One woman may have the exterior of a moss rose bud and the spiritual innards of a she-buzzard. Another may have the manners of a stevedore's boss and a heart as soft as a gelatine pudding. Yet one is as truly "womanly" as the other. There is no formula for womanliness. Even the same spirit may wear pink ruffles one day and corrugated iron the next.

The truth is, most of us are spiritual mavericks. Our bodies may belong to some particular herd—we may be corralled, ear slit, branded and registered—but our souls roam strange ranges, lonely and unclassified.

WE'RE QUITE WILLING TO ACKNOWLEDGE THIS FACT WHEN IT APPLIES TO OURSELVES, WE ALL LIKE TO FEEL THAT WE'RE DIFFERENT—THAT WE FUNCTION IN MYSTERIOUS WAYS, UNKNOWN TO THE COMMON TRIBE. AND WE'RE MOST WILLING TO EXCUSE OURSELVES WHEN WE DO STRANGE, UNPRECEDENTED THINGS. BUT JUST LET THE OTHER FELLOW TRY TO DO THEM—Ah! THAT'S DIFFERENT!

Life would be infinitely freer, richer, and happier if we would stop trying to measure each other by a rule o' thumb. How much more interesting and thrilling human association would be if we would put aside our intolerant notions about what people should be and do, and treat each other with generosity and imagination. If we'd just let people Be Themselves—their illogical, inconsistent, unconventional, erratic Selves—what humiliation and resentment would be avoided—how many lives, that are now crippled, would walk straight and beautiful!

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

THOUGH it is often well to get away
From dull routine that rules us, day and day,
When I leave home I miss such faithful friends,
I'm happiest the day my journey ends!

The firelight greets me here when I get back,
Its flames aglow with lights all strange from lack,
And in my corner of the ingle-nook
I find my well-worn chair, my dearest book.

And here upon the mantelshelf a voice,
"Tick-tock, tick-tock," that makes my heart rejoice!
The clock, whose steady accents only seem
To add fresh quiet to this tranquil dream.

Old friends they are, friends honest, true and tried!
When I go out to wander far and wide
So much I miss their notes from life's refrain
That I am gladdest when I'm home again!
